Armagh Cathedral.

[From Thos. U. Sadleir.]

‘White marble monument to Sir Thomas Molyneux, who is represented reading. Beneath the statue, which is by Roubilliac, is a carved panel representing the interior of a sick room’ :—

In memory of Sir Thomas Molyneux, Bart., M.D., F.R.S., Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, and Physician General of the Forces of Ireland, second son of Samuel Molyneux, of Castle Dillon, in County of Armagh, Esquire, by Margaret, his wife, daughter of William Dowdall, of the County of Meath, Esquire. He was lineally descended from Sir Thomas Molyneux, Knight, Chancellor of the Irish Exchequer in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and was greatly distinguished in his generation for professional skill, varied learning and private worth. Born 14 April, 1661. Died in the year 1733. This monumental statue, executed at the expence of his son the Rt. Hon. Sir Capel Molyneux, Bart., was placed in the Cathedral by his grandson, Lieutenant General Sir Thomas Molyneux, Bart., of Castle Dillon. Roubiliac sculpsit. Thomas Molyneux, Eq. Aur., M.D., Obiit 13 Oct' MDCCXXXIII, aetat 72. Filius Capel Molyneux, Eq. Aur. posuit, A.D. MDCCCLII, L. F. Roubiliac invt. et. scit.

NOTE about the carved plaque in front of the pedestal of the statue of Sir Thomas (Dr.) Molyneux, Bart., M.D., F.R.S., &c., Armagh Cathedral, by Mr. J. R. Garstin.

'This carving appears to represent allegorical figures. A sick man appears, lying on a long couch. Beside him is a female draped figure, probably to represent his wife. [The verger thinks this figure represents Death, but what he thought ribs of a skeleton are part of dress, indistinct.] At the foot of the couch are three figures. One seems to represent a physican, but it is not probably a likeness of Molyneux; and even if it was so, it can no longer be so described, as the head was renewed, as were two other parts of the sculpture. The other figures apparently show an apothecary holding a medicine cup, and Æsculapius with the usual staff or rod, round which is twined a serpent. On the base of the actual statue is an inscription giving the name and date of death, 19th October, 1733, and at the back another stating that the statue was carved nineteen years afterwards by Roubilliac. Another inscription on the side of the pedestal, undated, but much later, records that the statue was placed in the Cathedral by Sir Capel Molyneux, of Castle Dillon. It may have been brought from Dublin, where it was injured.

The Statue of Sir Thomas Molyneux in the Cathedral.

'This was the subject of communication to Notes and Queries, 3rd series. In vol. vii, 417, May 27, 1865, "Abhba" (Rev. Beaver Blacker) writes to correct a statement in Wills' "Lives of Illustrious Irishmen," iv, 23 (Dub., 1842), about the burial-place of William Molyneux (elder brother of Sir Thomas), which he says was at St. Audoen's, not St. Andrew's, Dublin. He says William Molyneux died in Dublin, 11th October, 1698, and that his monument, with a long Latin inscription printed in Gilbert's "History of Dublin," vol. i, 283, "was removed from St. Audoen's early in the nineteenth century by Sir Capel Molyneux, Bart. (author of 'Life of William Molyneux, Patriot and Philosopher'), and for many years past has been safely lodged in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Armagh."

'But this was erroneous, and related to William, not Sir Thomas Molyneux, his brother; and in Notes and Queries, 5th August, 1865 (3rd ser., viii, 113), there is a long and interesting communication, signed E. M. C., including the following notice of the statue:—

"It is a fine work by Roubilliac standing on a base highly ornamented in relief, and was probably executed when that sculptor was employed on the bust now in Trinity College Library, when William Molyneux was M.P. for Dublin University. It was not a monumental statue. At the end of the eighteenth century it was in a wooden house in the wood at Castle Dillon, the family seat near Armagh, the intention having been to erect a suitable building over it. That idea being finally abandoned, it was removed for safety to a vault under the old mansion, the weight being too great for any room in it. Finally, on the restoration of Armagh Cathedral by the late Archbishop Lord J. G. Beresford (1840), it was given to him by the then Baronet, Sir Thomas, for the adornment of the aisle, where it now stands." It is in the nave near the west door.

'(See Webb's Compendium Ir. Biog.; Rogers' Memoir of Armagh Cathedral, p. 133, which prints the inscriptions. Sir Thomas, the 1st Bart., was buried in St. Audoen's, Dublin.)'

JOHN R. GARSTIN.

[From E. MacDowel Cosgrave, M.D.]

'On a mural tablet':—

This monument is erected to Sir Capel Molyneux, Bart., of Castledillon, in this county, and also to Margaret his wife daughter of Sir Neal O'Donel Bart of Newport in the County Mayo. To those who knew them any detail of their many virtues would be unnecessary but let this tablet record for the benefit of strangers and posterity that under his fostering care a grateful tenantry prospered, and were happy that in his character were united the uncompromising patriot the affable superior the polished equal the generous patron and the honest man. In hers (during years of acute bodily suffering) that patience under her own afflictions that sympathy with the sorrows of others which evinced the resignation and charity of a Christian. To the poor of this neighbourhood she was a bountiful and judicious benefactress to her friends an affectionate and endearing companion to her husband a beloved and faithful counsellor.

Their mortal remains are deposited in the family vault under the church of St. Audoen's, Dublin.

Sir Capel Molyneux Bart born March 30th 1750 died December 1st 1832.

Margaret his wife born December 26th 1765 died April 5th 1831.

COUNTY CARLOW.

Killerrig Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘This is a small burial-ground, situated by the road-side, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles to the north-west of Tullow. All that remains of the old church is a portion of the east gable-end, containing a single-light window of cut granite, with an ogée head.

‘A large walled-in enclosure has been built by the Humfrey family, of Dublin, on the foundations of the church; inside, in the west wall, there are projecting two slabs of cut-stone work, a sill and a lintel, which supported a large tablet, now dislodged and lying in a fractured state on the ground; it bears the following inscription’ :—

This Burial Place was enclosed by JOHN HUMFREY OF DUBLIN ESQ^{ER}.
for the use of his family in the year of Our Lord 1808.
The Remains of an amiable beloved wife, and five of their children are here interred, to whom he hopes to be united in happiness.

‘In the Protestant Church at Tullow there is a monument to the memory of a John Humfrey, of Killerrig (ob. 1827), and his wife, Anne Mary (ob. 1811), daughter of Elias Caulfield-Best, of Bestfield (see the JOURNAL, vol. ii, p. 439).’

‘On a headstone’ :—

Here Lyeth y^e Body | of Timothy Donovan | Aged 63
Also his | wife catherin Bryan | aged 56 | who departed
this | Life in the year of | 1765

[Remainder below the ground.]

‘Near the west wall of the churchyard there is a socketed granite stone, apparently the base of an old cross.’

‘On the south side lies a large fractured slab, bearing this inscription, which is hard to decipher’ :—

HERE INTERRED THE BODY OF
S^t JOHN BREWSTER JANUARY 1st 1729
AGED 80 YEARS
& MARY HIS DAUGHTER OCTOBER 21st 1770
AGED -0 YEARS.

‘It is just possible that the “St” in the second line is a “Sr.” There are tombstones to the families of Brewster of the County Wicklow (1813), and Brewster of Tullow (1754), in the Protestant churchyard at Tullow (see the JOURNAL, vol. ii, pp. 441 and 446).’

‘On a small fragment of a limestone slab, now placed on a heap of stones, there is inscribed’ :—

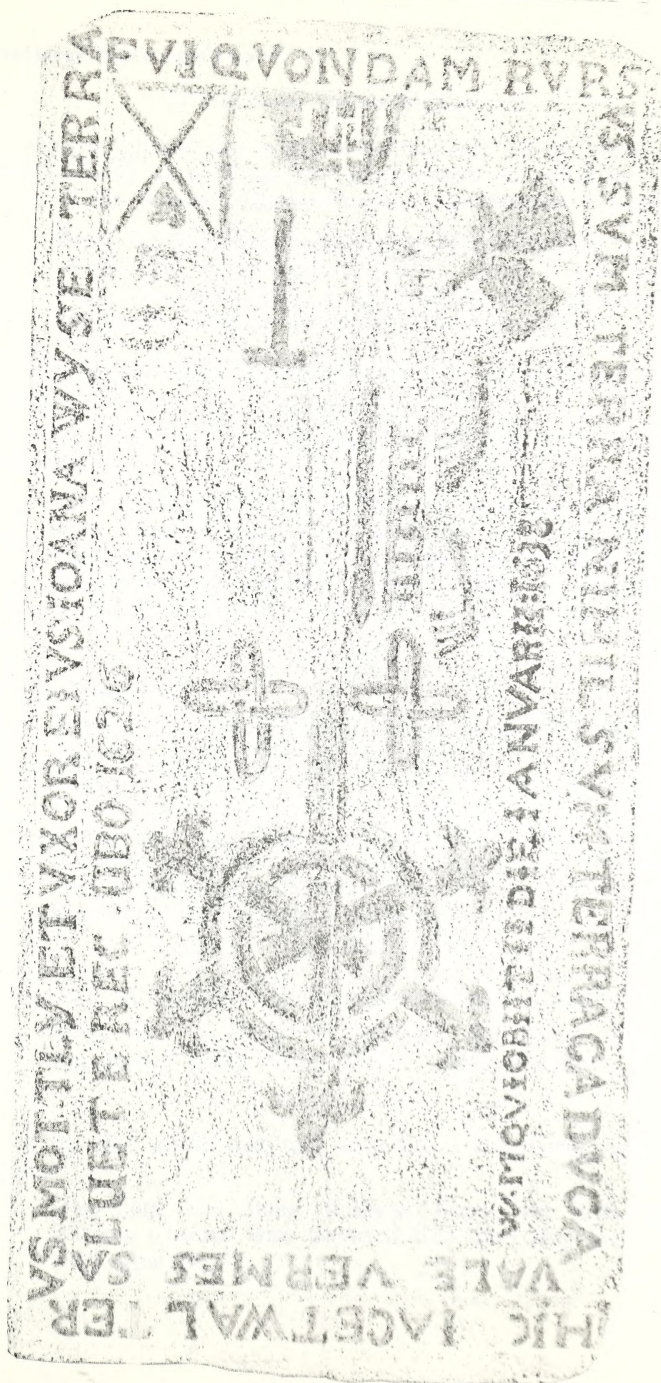

. Killer[rig]
. . [Benja]min Bunbu[ry]

‘The remainder of this headstone has quite disappeared. The Benjamin Bunbury here named was a descendant of the Benjamin Bunbury of Killerrig, who died on the 3rd April, 1707, and whose tomb-slab exists in St. Mary’s churchyard, Carlow. This latter Benjamin was the son of Thomas, youngest son of Sir Henry Benjamin Bunbury, Knight, of Stanney in Cheshire.’

‘Benjamin Bunbury, of Killerrig, who died in 1707, had five sons, viz. :—

1. Joseph, of Jobstown, Co. Carlow.
2. Benjamin, of Killerrig, Co. Carlow.
3. Thomas, of Cloghna, Co. Carlow.
4. William, of Lisnevagh and Moyle, Co. Carlow.
5. Michael, of Kilfeacle, Co. Tipperary.

‘The above inscriptions also appear, incorrectly copied, in vol. iv, pp. 189 and 190, of the JOURNAL.’

THE MOTTLY SLAB OF 1626, IN THE TULLOW CHURCHYARD, CO. CARLOW.
[From a rubbing by Lord Walter FitzGerald, 1912.]

Tulow Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘On the opposite page is shown a “rubbing” of the seventeenth-century Mottly slab, which has already been described on p. 187, vol. iv, of the JOURNAL; the Latin part of the inscription reads’ :—

Terra fui quondam, rursus sum terra, nihil sum, terra caduca vale, vermes saluete, recubo. [i.e.—I once was dust, I am dust again, I am nothing else. Farewell, frail earth; hail, O worms, I lay me down].

‘Among the older inscriptions in the burial-ground are the following’ :—

‘On a headstone with a peculiar conical-shaped top on the south side’ :—

Here Lyeth the | Body of Richard Walsh of | Tulow
who Departed this | Life April the 17th day 1765 |
Aged 64 years with 6 of his | children as also Richard |
Moore his Grandson who | Departed this life April 26 |
1764 | Aged 7 y^{rs} May they rest | peace Amen.

‘On a flat slab’ :—

Thomas Brewster of Tulow | Departed this life the 8th day of | March 1754 in the 65th year of his age |
Margaret Brewster wife of | said Thomas Brewster
Departed | this life the 6th day of May 1769 | in the 75th year of her age. | Here lieth also the Body of John |
Brewster Esq^r son of the above mentioned | Thomas and Margaret who Departed | this life on the second day of March 1786 | Aged 63 years.

‘On a small headstone at the west end near the wall’ :—

Here lies y^e Body of | Ellinor dougherty who |
Departed y^e 1 day of iun^e | 1750. Aged 53 years.

‘A flat slab at the west end, near the church tower, difficult to decipher’ :—

Here lieth the Body of Mary | James the wife of
William | James who departed this life | May the 1st
1817 Aged 96 y^{rs}.

‘On a table-tomb at the west end’ :—

Erected by Christmas More in Memory of his Father and Mother.

Underneath Lieth the Body of Mary
Moore wife of Iohn of Paulville who Depate^d [sic] this life the 22^d of May 1793 aged 72 years.

Also her husband Iohn Moore who departed this life the 22^d of Dis^{br} [sic] 1797 aged 98 years.

‘On a flat slab at the west end’ :—

Here lieth the Body of Alice Burgefs who departed this life May the 1st 1793 in the 76th year of her age.

also her husband William Burgefs who Departed this life Sept^r the 13th 1799

his daughter-in-law Jane Burgefs dep^d this life Dec^r 27th 1837 aged 77 years. Also his son Henry Burgefs dep^d this life June Aged 24 years.

‘Tulow Church is dedicated to St. Columbkil. The Worcester-shire antiquary, Thomas Dineley, who visited Tulow in 1680, thus alludes to the church in his diary’ :—

“Tullagh hath one parochial church dedicated to S^t Columb, which saint is sayd to be buried in Down Patrick, in the North of Ireland, in the County of Down, with two other capitall saints, S^t. Bridget and S^t. Patrick.

“S^t. Columb’s Church is also made use of for a schoolhouse; in the churchyard is seen the fantastick monument on the other side, which I touched off for want of a better remark upon the place.”* (This is the Byrne slab of 1625 described in the JOURNAL, vol. iv, pp. 186-8.)

‘The inscriptions on pages 237 and 238 of volume viii given under Tulow, County Carlow, belong to Tallaght, County Dublin.’

THE DYSART-O'DEA CROSS, COUNTY CLARE.
[From a photograph by Lawrence, Dublin.]

COUNTY CLARE.

The Dysart O'Dea High Cross. Parish of Dysart (Tola).

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘A cast of this cross stands in the gallery of the Dublin Science and Art Museum. It shows two inscriptions carved in blank spaces on different faces of the base. One runs’ :—

THIS CROSS WAS NEWLY REPAIRED BY MICHAEL O
DEA SON OF CONNOR CRONE O DEA IN THE YEARE
1683

‘A few of the letters in the inscription are conjoined. The word CRONE means “the swarthy.” The O'Dea territory was known as “Kinell Fearmaic,” which lay in the present Barony of Inchiquin.’

‘The second inscription reads’ :—

RE-ERECTED BY FRANCIS HUTCHINSON SYN-
GE OF DYSART FOURTH SON OF THE LATE SI-R EDWARD SYNGE BAR^T AND MARY HELENA
HIS WIFE IN THE YEAR 1871.

‘Sir Edward Synge, 2nd Baronet, married Mary Helena, eldest daughter of Robert Welsh, of the Irish Bar; he died in 1843; their fourth son, born in 1820, died on the 17th September, 1871: his three elder brothers each succeeded to the Baronetcy.’

‘The Patron Saint of Dysart O'Dea was St. Tola, alias Manawla, who was venerated on the 30th of March.’

Feakle Church, Co. Clare.

[From Mr. T. J. Westropp.]

‘The church is near the pass leading through Glenbonnive to Lough Graney. The patron was St. Mochonna (not to be confused with Mochulla of Tulla), an unknown saintly lady, as some say. It is called Fichell in the Taxation of 1302. A gable of the old structure was standing in 1780, but was then demolished. The present church is much later. The founder is probably Mochonna, of Moyroe, a not distant parish on Lough Derg; commemorated under March 29th. The Burke Monument, 1779, with an elaborate coat-of-arms, was given in these pages in 1897 (see vol. iii, plate ii, p. 385). The other stones are usually large recumbent slabs; some are covered with sod and rubbish; in some the inscriptions are illegible, but most are well cut and fairly preserved.

'The graveyard is hideously overcrowded, and the scene of frequent interments, each displacing several previous burials; it is heaped with coffin planks and mountings, while bones and skulls, some moss-grown! are of frequent occurrence. Three old quern stones are used as monuments on various graves, and there are no fragments of the old church to be seen; it was probably of uncut stone like others in the hills. The oldest monuments lie in the centre of the southern part, near the Burke tablet, which is known to have been in the older church.'

COUNTY CORK.

Ballyspillane Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘This secluded churchyard lies a little below a cross-roads about three miles north-east of Midleton Railway Station. Though seemingly seldom used, it was quite free from weeds; whilst the aged trees by which it is overshadowed gave it a singularly calm, cool, and reposeful air on the very hot August day I visited it. There are but few graves, and fewer headstones, and not a vestige that I could see of the old church that must have stood here. The Spillanes, from whom the name is derived, are still represented in the neighbourhood, and have their burial-ground here. The following form about half the number of inscriptions to be seen, the remainder being either recut, or the headstones so much ivy-grown as to prevent them being read’ :—

Kilcully Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘ Kilcully Churchyard lies on an elevated plateau about five miles northward from the city of Cork. It is fairly well kept, and is nicely shaded and sheltered by ancient trees. Though crowded with graves, causing it to be recently enlarged, there are relatively few headstones, while many of the graves are marked by decayed wooden crosses. Portions of the west, north, and south walls of the old church still remain, whose internal dimensions are about 35 feet long by 14 feet wide. The east gable is perfect, and contains a small, deeply splayed two-light ogee-headed window whose base is now almost on a level with the soil. The following are the oldest legible inscriptions in this churchyard.

‘Raised letters’ :—

This Stone | was erected by Tim^y | Den^s And James

St. Columbkille's Well and the Rock of Doon. Parish of Kilmacrenan.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘The following notes on this interesting place have been kindly supplied by Mr. Robert Welch, M.R.I.A., of Belfast; by whom, too, the photograph was taken from which the illustration opposite was made.

‘The Rock of Doon, or “Doonie Rock,” as the peasantry call it, was the Inauguration Place of the O'Donnells, chiefs of Tyrconnell, now the County Donegal.

‘The Blessed Well near it is dedicated to St. Columbkille; it is visited for cures daily by numbers of people who attend from all parts of the north-west of Ireland, particularly by cripples or those deformed in any way. The objects stuck in the ground near the Well are crutches bound round with rags, left by those who have been cured.

‘The quantity of rags here is quite phenomenal, and the little stream is nearly choked with rag-bound crutches blown into it by recent gales. Every bush, too, on that side of the hill is laden with rags.

‘Before approaching the Well, those that wear boots and shoes take them off and leave them on the far side of the road, as it must be visited bare-footed.

‘Water is taken out of the Well with certain prayers said, and the bottle is stoppered with a tuft of moss and grass, not a cork; only the material on the spot must be used.

‘On the Patron Saint's Day, the 9th of June, there is naturally a very large gathering of people present.’

the mortal Remains of

MRS. ANNE GRACE,

who departed this Life on the 6th of April 1821
in the 29th Year of her Age.

With gentle Manners, a feeling Heart, and a Mind adorned with the Virtues of MEEKNESS, CANDOUR, SINCERITY, and BENEFICENCE

She was the delight and the ornament of her Family and her Friends.

Her steady and scrupulous devotedness to her duties as a CHRISTIAN, was unclouded

by Austerity or Gloom

Her ever watchful attention to the Wants and Interests of others, proceeded less from a Mind ambitious of conferring favours, than a Heart that delighted in doing good.

Her COURTESY and HUMANITY were the gentle offspring of Sympathy with the feelings and sufferings of her Fellow creatures
And her RELIGION,

was the pure and cheerful emanation of a soul that had found its rest

In God.

Oh Death! where is thy sting?

Oh Grave! where is thy victory?

ALSO OF
GERALD CRAMER COGHILL,
BORN 26 : SEPT 1854. DIED 15 : JULY 1873.

COGHILL'S COURT, DAME STREET, DUBLIN.

"On a portion of the ancient glebe of St. Andrew's parish, on the north side of the street, Sir George Wentworth, in the reign of Charles I, expended £600 in erecting a dwelling-house. This glebe, extending along Dame Street seventy feet, and from north to south ninety-eight feet, came in 1670 into possession of Sir Alexander Bence, and was subsequently acquired by Sir John Coghill, Master in Chancery, who died in 1699. His son, Dr. Marmaduke Coghill, became Judge of the Prerogative Court, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Member of Parliament for Trinity College, Dublin.

"In his capacity of Judge of the Prerogative Court, Coghill was called on to decide a question between a wife and her husband, who had given her a good beating. The doctor delivered a grave opinion, that moderate chastisement, with such a switch as he held his hand, was within the husband's matrimonial privilege. This decision so alarmed a lady to whom he had paid his addresses with a prospect of success that she dismissed the assertor of so ungallant a doctrine, and Coghill died, unmarried, in 1738. His niece and heiress, Hester, became Countess of Charleville; and dying without issue, bequeathed her property to her cousin, John Cramer, who assumed the name of Coghill, and was created a Baronet in 1778. His son, Sir Josiah, attained to the rank of Vice-Admiral, married the eldest daughter of Chief Justice Bushe; and their son is the present representative of the family."*

'Article on the Cramer-Coghill family in Cork Archaeological Journal, April-June No., 1910. Short account of pedigree in Cork Archaeological Journal, "Notes and Queries," July-September, 1910, p. 143. Name "Cramer," from ancestor, Colonel Thomas Kramer of Lower Germany, made a free denizen of Ireland, 1639. Name "Coghill," originally Cock-Hill, from English ancestors: alluded to in crest—Coghill, Bart., Yorkshire,—On a mound vert, a cock, wings expanded or, ducally crowned gules. Motto, Non dormit qui custodit, "The guardian does not sleep" (Fairbairn). Similar crest-motto for "Cramer."

* Sir John Gilbert, "History of Dublin," vol. ii, pp. 265, 266 (1861).

‘From Register of Burials, St. Werburgh’s Church, Dublin: “Edmond Coghill, 1785; Rev. Dr. Jacob-Cramer, Incumbent of Drumcondra, cousin of Sir Josiah Coghill, Nov. 25, 1823.”’

INSCRIPTION ON NEW BELL.

MATTHEW O’BYRNE BELLFOUNDER JAMES STREET DUBLIN.

“ARISE HE CALLETH THEE.”

1911.

‘Dedicated in June, 1911. Gift of an anonymous donor. Weight about 3 cwt. Very musical tone. Suspended in bell-gable at west end of church. (Swung on iron frame, “rotary system,” much easier to ring than old bell.) Cost about £40. Tongue “as big as yer two fists together.” Inscription seems inlaid in brass letters.

‘Old bell, at present in church porch, weighed about 1 cwt., has no inscription or maker’s mark visible, was probably made when present church was erected, about 1750; has curious arrangement on top for hanging, four iron “loops” like the four handles of a mether or old Irish drinking-cup. Tongue small and much worn away, producing cracked tone.’

CHURCH PLATE.

Described with kind assistance from Rev. Keith M. Dunlop, M.A.]

‘Paten.—Old Irish silver, Dublin-made. Inscription’ :—

‘The gift of Hefter Coghill to the Church of Clonturk.

‘Hall-marks.—Harp and crown; Hibernia; T. (1739-40).’

‘The ancient name of this parish was “Clonturk,” which may signify “The Meadow of the Boar,” as the neighbouring “Clontarf” signifies the “Meadow of the Bull.” But many authorities translate it now as “The Meadow of the Tolka,” as it lies north of the small river anciently called the Tulcan, and corresponds to “Clonliffe,” the meadow lying north of the Liffey. (Ancient possessions of Christ Church Cathedral, it is said.) The name Druim Chonnrach refers to the ridge of high ground further north, towards Santry, but the title is now extended to the whole district north of the Tolka.’

‘Flagon.—Old Irish silver, Dublin-made. Inscription underneath’ :—

Clanturke 1743 M.C.

‘Hall-marks.—Harp and crown; IH, crowned; Hibernia.

'Offertory Plate.—Old Irish silver, Dublin-made (used as paten occasionally). Inscription':—

Clonturke 1743 M.C.

'Hall-marks.—Hibernia; Harp and crown; IH, crowned.'

'The letters M.C. might stand for Mary Coghill, who rebuilt this church about the year 1750; or for her brother, Marmaduke Coghill, LL.D. (ob. 1738), in whose memory the church was built. The residence of this family was at Drumcondra House, the present Missionary College of All Hallows adjoining the churchyard. His brother James inhabited Belvidere House, the present Training College of St. Patrick's for National School Teachers.'

'Old chalice.—Silver, shaped like antique christening-mug, with chased sides. Height, $4\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Inscription underneath':—

Drumcondra Church
Clonturk.

'There is an indistinct hall-mark underneath, which was thought to be the letter R, but this was not definitely ascertained. This chalice is considered very unique. The chasing appears to have been hand-wrought, and the absence of a stem is unusual.'

'Two Modern Chalices.—English silver, Birmingham mark, inscribed on each stem':—

TO THE GLORY OF GOD AND IN LOVING MEMORY OF CHARLES LUTHER HYDER WHO DIED IN KRONSTADT, SOUTH AFRICA, 21ST May, 1902.
PRESENTED TO DRUMCONDRA PARISH CHURCH
BY HIS FATHER, FEB. 1904.

'Hall-marks.—Anchor; lion; d.; W.B.L. on heart-shaped shield.

'Memorial of a young Irish soldier who fell in the last war.'

'Two older offertory plates.—Sheffield plate, electro-plated on copper. Inscribed around each on upper rim':—

Presented to the Rev^d. Will^m Barlow Minister & the Parishioners of Drumcondra Thomas Ball of High Park Esq^r
& Rich^d Williams of Drumcondra
Castle Esq^r } Church Wardens 1825.

'High Park, situated on top of the ridge from which the parish now takes its name of "Drumcondra" (i.e., Conra's Ridge; Duncuanach is its most ancient name in some of the old records), is occupied by the Convent of our Lady of Charity of Refuge, generally called St. Mary's Convent, High Park.

'Drumcondra Castle, formerly a residence of Lord James Butler, is now St. Joseph's Asylum for Male Blind. There is said to have been a pathway from it to the church in old times, through the grounds of the present Missionary College of All Hallows.'

'Two Offertory Plates.—Sheffield plate, similar to above, lately presented by the Incumbent, Rev. E. H. Lewis-Crosby, B.D.'

'Offertory Plates.—Sheffield plate. Inscribed round rim':—

In Loving Memory of Thomas and Ellen Batt. Presented by their Family to Drumcondra Church. November 1901.

'Marks underneath. Hand holding three feathers. HA; EA; PA; EPNS.

'A similar plate. Inscribed round rim in capital letters':—

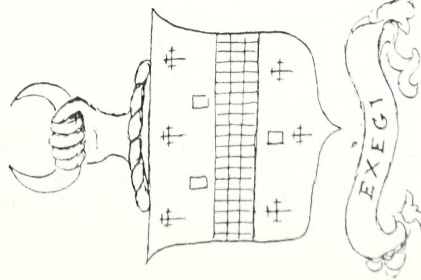

For the Glory of God and the use of Drumcondra Church.
Presented by E. H. Lewis-Crosby, Rector, 1905.✠

'No marks identified.'

'Two other plates, already described, given by owners of High Park and Drumcondra Castle in 1825.'

DRUMCONDRA CASTLE.

'Scene of the romantic historical marriage of Hugh O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, and Mabel Bagenal, sister of the English Marshal, Sir Henry Bagenal, August 3rd, 1591. Sir Henry had attempted to prevent or delay the marriage. "He removed the lady from Newry to her sister's house . . . who was the wife of Sir Patrick Barnwell." Lady Barnwell dwelt at Turvey House by the estuary near Swords and Lusk. "The Earl followed Miss Bagenal thither. Her brother-in-law received him courteously; and while the O'Neill engaged the family in conversation a confidential friend rode off with the lady." When she was well on her way "towards the place where we were agreed upon," O'Neill writes that he followed, and that once within the walls of Drumcondra Castle, then the seat of Sir William Warren, "an honest Englishman's House," the Chief of the Red Hand sent hastily to fetch Thomas Jones, Queen Elizabeth's Bishop of Meath (who after the affair was in a state of pitiable alarm), "that the world may know that we are married together according to her Majesty's law." The O'Neill afterwards took his bride to the noble castle he had beautified for her at Dungannon.

'On the spot where Drumcondra Castle reared its strength there now stands the Asylum for the Blind, under the care of the Carmelite Brothers. A tablet in one of the passages still declares "This house was builded by John Bathe and by Elinor Preston, his wife, daughter to Jenico Preston, Lord Viscomes Gormanston, A.D. 1560." This tablet probably graced the façade of the keep the evening Mabel Bagenal alighted in the courtyard.

"The State Papers and archives have given up many secrets. . . . We have now the Lord Deputy's and Council's and Sir Henry Bagenal's account of the transaction, and also the version of the Bishop who married the pair of them; and, above all, Hugh O'Neill's own narrative of his wooing and winning of the English beauty. Nay, more, thanks to the Bishop aforesaid, we have (for he has happily enshrined it in his apologia to Lord Burghley) the lovely girl's version of the romance as well."

'Summarized from an interesting paper on "Irish Soldiers in Love and War," by M. M. O'Hara, in the "Weekly Freeman," St. Patrick's Day Number, March 12th, 1910, page 13.'

NOTE.—Crest of Palmer (Bart., Kent), what was mistaken for wild cat, is "a demi-panther, rampant" [gardant], "flames issuing from ears and mouth, holding a palm-branch, all ppr. Motto, Palma virtuti ("the palm is for virtue"). Fairbairn's Crests.

Dalzell Tomb.—"The motto of the Dalzells, "I dare," commemorates the utterance of an ancestor, who in those words undertook the dangerous task of cutting down a dead body—that of a favourite of the King who had been hanged by outlaws—an achievement further perpetuated by the "naked man" in the coat-of-arms."—"Allusive Armory," Sir Thomas Drew.

I have noticed that it adds immensely to the interest and value of armorial drawings if they are described underneath in technical terms, as in the Howth Tomb in the JOURNAL, so I tried to do this with St. Mary's Church sketches, but subject to correction.—E. O'M.

Kilbride Churchyard.

[From Mr. J. R. Fowler.]

'This ancient building is situated on one side of a boreen leading to the Naas Road. It is circular in form, and walled round. Just below it stood Kilbride Castle, pulled down in 1858. No vestiges of it remain. The church is a small edifice, choked with elders, &c. It has no windows in the nave. At the west end is a small room, projecting from the body of the building. It is supposed to be a sacristy. It has one square ope, splayed inward, and the fragments of a projecting moulding of slate. I thought this might be a floor at first. Some suppose it to be a vault, but it is too small. The entrance is by an arch of stone, one of whose sides is composed by the wall of this place, and is, consequently, 7 feet thick, the other only 3 feet. The arch takes up 3 feet on each side, so that there is a clear space of 4 feet. This parish, with those of Drimmagh and Kilmahuddrick, is merged in the modern one of Clondalkin.'

Kilmainham Burial-ground.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'On either side of the approach leading from Island Bridge to the Royal Hospital is a large burial-ground now cut in two by the avenue. This is the ancient Kilmainham churchyard, which is also known as "Bully's Acre." That portion on the south side of the avenue does not now contain many monuments. The following inscriptions have been copied from a few of the older stones.

'The first which is here given is rudely cut in relief on a small brown flag, which is now placed leaning against a modern monument; it reads':—

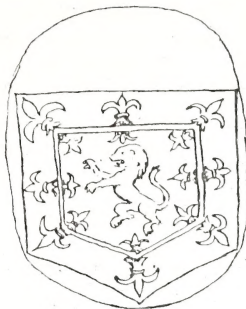

HEARE LIET
 H THE BODY OF
 HIVE [? Hugh] HACKET
 AND ELIZABET
 H HACKET WH O DIED IN THE YEARE 1652.

'Near the above is a flat slab with this inscription still very clear':—

Here Lyeth the Body of Iohn | Goodwin Esq^r who
 Departed | this Life the 2nd day of February | 1750
 Aged 50 years.

‘ At the top of a large square headstone of bad quality is cut in relief a coat-of-arms ’:—

‘ Close to the above is a large slab on mason-work, which bears this almost illegible inscription ’:—

Here lies interred the body of Major Charles Wilson

[who departe]d this Life
.r of his Age
.day of February 1744.

‘ On the opposite or northern side of the avenue is by far the larger portion of the burial-ground, but it is now only thinly dotted with headstones, none of which are of any real interest or age. In it stands the large ancient Celtic granite cross-shaft traditionally said to mark the burial-place of Murrough, son of King Brian Boru, who fell in battle against the Danes, at Clontarf, in 1014. This northern burial-ground was planted with trees by the Board of Works some years ago; the place was then tidied up by them, and some levelling carried out, when (it is said) many flat slabs and sunken headstones were covered over and completely buried. The burial-ground was closed to public interments in 1832. The inscriptions which follow were copied either because they were faint, or that they were the oldest that could be discovered.

'In 1820 the famous prize-fighter Dan Donnelly was buried in "Bully's Acre," which was a name given by the lower orders to the Kilmainham burial-ground. He died at the age of fifty, and in 1815 defeated the English champion boxer George Cooper on the Curragh of Kildare. An altar-tomb was erected to his memory, bearing an inscription describing his career and successes in the ring, but the tomb was destroyed one night, by, it is thought, some guardsmen on duty at Kilmainham, which made the regiment so unpopular with the people of Dublin that it was shortly afterwards removed to other quarters. Of the tomb there is now not the slightest trace, but its site is still pointed out in the north-east corner of the larger portion of the burial-ground.*

* For a description of an obelisk erected on the Curragh to Dan Donnelly's memory, see the County Kildare Archæological Journal, vol. iii., p. 28.

The Inscription on the FitzEustace, Baron of Portlester, Tomb at New Abbey near Kilcullen Bridge,
County Kildare, circa 1496.

I was looking through a volume in manuscript (labelled F. 4.18) in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, which contains scrappy pedigrees of many Anglo-Irish families, and came across a rough entry of a portion of the New Abbey inscription, which is there given as follows:—

. . . . fz Eustace miles Ds de Portlester nuper Hib: et Margareta Janico uxor eius fundatores et fabricatores hui' domi: quor animab' propitiet Deus Amen. . . . Hoc in pulvere dormio in novissimo die surrectur'. . . .

Though possibly not very reliable, this fragment is well worth comparing with the rubbings given at p. 574, vol. viii, of the JOURNAL. I would fix the date of the manuscript volume as belonging to the early part of the eighteenth century.

W. FITZGERALD.

MISCELLANEA.

Some Remarks on the Notes by the late Rev. R. H. Long on the Inscriptions in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Fethard, County Tipperary.

(JOURNAL, Vol. VII, 1907, page 175, et seq.)

[By W. P. Pakenham-Walsh, R.E., M.R.S.A.I.]

In two cases in vol. vii, viz., "Henes," p. 176, and "Naish," p. 177, the Rev. R. H. Long states that nothing further is known of the families. From the attached extracts from Hackett Wills, it will be seen that there were Hennes in Fethard in 1679 and 1684, and Naishs, or Nashs, in 1639 and 1684.

The Edmond Naish who erected the slab in 1629 (p. 177) is probably identical with the "Cosen Edmond Naish" of the Will of 1639. It will be noted that the name Archer also occurs in this Will, and also in the Henes tomb of 1615 (p. 176).

Thomas Hackett, Churchwarden in 1702, was undoubtedly the brother and heir of James (Will, 1708), and not the Thomas who erected a tomb to his brother Patrick in 1680 (p. 178). I have been unable to place the latter, but there were evidently by this time several younger branches of the family settled in Fethard.

Ellena Hackett, the wife of Gaspard ———, who died 1635 (p. 178), may have been the sister of John Hackett (Will, 1639).

On page 179 there is a note:—

"The mention of Robert Vale's wife is the earliest connexion of the name Everard with Fethard."

O'Hart ("Irish Pedigrees"), however, says that Martin Everard came to Ireland with Prince John in 1187. He was descended from an Everard who came to England with William I. From the second son descended John Everard, living in County Tipperary in 1356, and from him Lawrence Everard, who fought at Agincourt, and his brother Nicholas Everard, of Fethard, County Tipperary.

The Hacketts settled in County Tipperary also under John.

"The Rev. ——— Hackett" referred to on p. 179 was my grandfather, the Rev. John Winthrop Hackett, of St. James's, Bray, who was born in 1804, and died in 1888.

I do not think he can have been born at Lakefield, the modern name for Gambonstown, the family property of the Hacketts, as it passed out of the Hacketts' hands in 1797.

As I believe the descendants of Major James Hackett are extinct, the present representative is the Hon. John Winthrop Hackett, LL.D., M.L.C., of Perth, Western Australia.

The ancient arms, as borne on the tomb, 1508, and the arms of the Funeral Entry, 1639, quartered together, have been confirmed by Ulster King-of-Arms to the descendants of the Rev. John Winthrop Hackett.

The writer will be grateful for further information regarding the Hacketts of County Tipperary, as he is compiling a history of that family. Especially is he anxious to find the connexion with the Hacketts of Orchardstown, County Tipperary, who were certainly closely related to the Fethard line.

BOOK NOTICE.

MEMORIALS OF AN ANCIENT HOUSE. A History of the Family of Lister. By the Rev. H. L. Lyster Denny, M.A. Ballantyne, Hanson, & Co. Edinburgh, 1913. 25s.

We must congratulate our member, Mr. Denny, on producing such a valuable record of this ancient North of England family, of which a branch migrated to Ireland in the second half of the sixteenth century. It is a handsome volume, full of excellent illustrations, and the printing and paper leave nothing to be desired.

The preface deals with the advisability of writing a family history, and proves conclusively that the object is not mere vanity, but rather to place at our disposal the experience of our ancestors, to recall their actions, and to realize their motives, and also to trace scientifically the growth of each individual type, both as regards facial appearance and individual characteristics. Genealogy is, even in these days, so often pervaded with myth, that a work of this kind, commencing with the derivation of the name, supplying pedigrees of all off-shoots as well as of families allied by marriage, and dealing seriatim with various scattered branches which cannot be conclusively traced to the parent stem, may well be considered a model. A novel and attractive feature is the reproduction of a number of armorial book-plates; and we must also congratulate the author on having worked out such a number of Royal descents which will make the book useful for reference, as well as a descent from Oliver Cromwell.

Though famed for good-looking daughters, the Irish Lysters, whose principal seats were Rocksavage, Grange, and Lysterfield, in County Roscommon, were not so successful as the English house, to which Lords Masham and Ribblesdale belong. But the most distinguished member of the family was undoubtedly Joseph, Lord Lister, who revolutionized surgery.

Our readers will be interested to find several epitaphs, one in England, beginning:—

“Here Thomas Lyster’s body lies,
At rest until the great Assize,
Where all men shall be truly try’d,
How well or ill they lived and dyed.”

There are also inscriptions from Cam, County Roscommon; Turlough, County Mayo; and St. Ann’s Churchyard, Dublin, which, we believe, have appeared in the JOURNAL.

Kilconnell Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘Many inscriptions from this Abbey have already appeared in the JOURNAL; see vols. i, p. 179, 373; ii, p. 118; vi, p. 327. The inscriptions which follow either have not before appeared, or else are given again owing to errors.

‘There are no burials outside the walls of the Abbey buildings, which are in charge of the Board of Works as a National Monument.

‘Close to the Abbey, on the north side, there is a well, now known as “The Lantern Well” in the locality, but which is marked down on the Ordnance Survey Map as “Lanfera’s Well.”’

TOMBS IN THE CHOIR.

‘In a recess in the south wall is a small slab bearing the following inscription in relief; its date is the seventeenth century:—

'In the north wall, near the west entrance, there is a recessed altar-tomb of great beauty, belonging to an unidentified family. The three covering slabs of the tomb are incomplete, as one of them, about 21 inches in breadth, is missing. Along the rim of the two outer slabs runs an inscription in the black-letter characters, which, with the exception of the first few words, is undecipherable, as the upper portions of the letters are chipped away. The legible words are':—

Illud monumentum est pro (or "per") con

'Over the canopy of the tomb there are two little figures representing a mitred abbot holding a crozier with the head turned inwards, and a Franciscan monk.

'The front of the tomb is divided up into six niches, each containing a saint, which, starting from the left, are placed in the following order; their names are over the head of each' :—

1. Sanct' ioannes.

St. John the Evangelist, holding a book in both hands.

2. Sanct' Lodovic.

St. Lewis, shown as a mitred ecclesiastic, holding in the left hand a crozier or staff, the crook of which is turned outwards. The right hand is in the blessing-giving posture. St. Louis was Bishop of Toulouse, venerated on the 19th of August.

3. Sancta maria.

The Blessed Virgin Mary, crowned, holds a book in the left hand, and a portion of her robe in the right hand.

4. Sanct' ionnes.

St. John the Baptist holds an Agnus Dei, or lamb supporting a cross, in his left hand, and with the right points to it. Between his feet is the head of a curly-coated animal.

5. Sanct' iacob.'

St. James the Great, holding a book in the left hand, and a T-topped staff in the right hand.

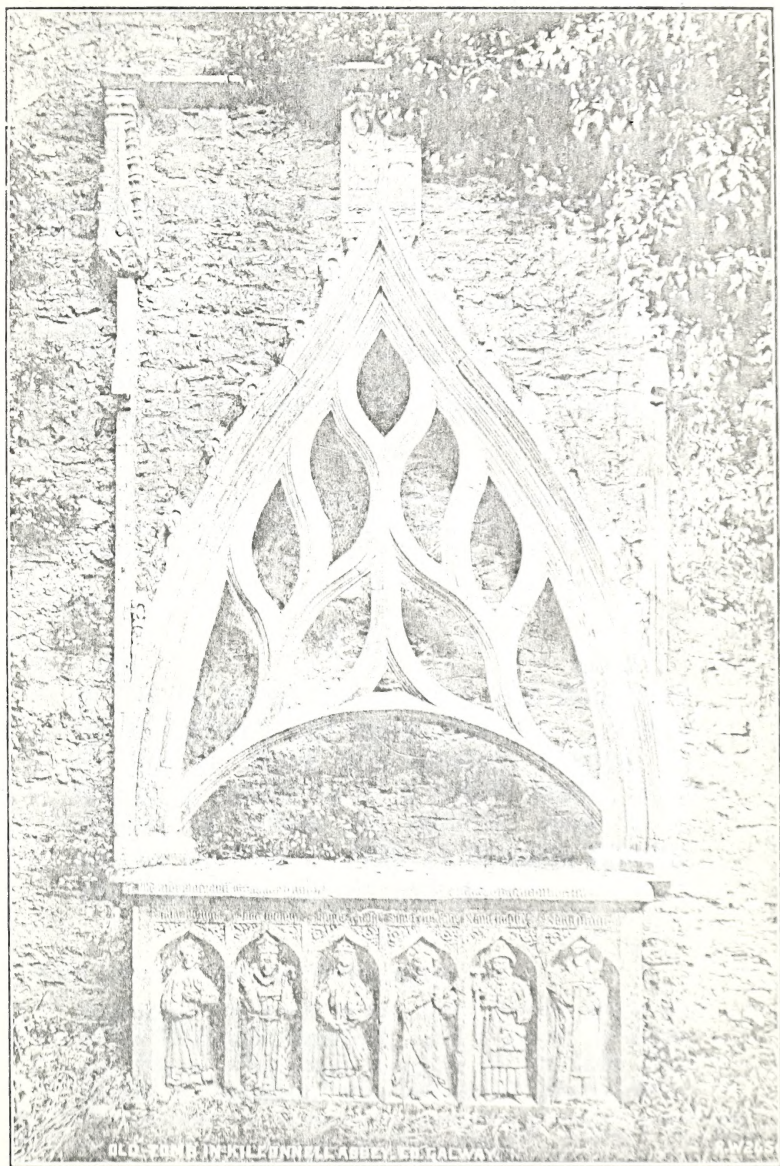

6. Sanct' dinnois.

St. Denis holds a book in the right hand, and a long cross-topped staff in the left.

[From Miss M. Redington.]

‘A little cross, broken in two, stands on a heap of loose stones close by the Holy Well of Toberbrackan. The following inscription is cut on it, in a peculiar fashion, and the I.H.S is reversed. There is what appears to be an 18 on the right arm of the cross as you face it, a portion of which is broken off, as well as the left-hand top corner of the cross-head.’

Tyrone House. Kilcolgan Parish.

[From Mr. T. U. Sadleir.]

‘On the floor of a bedroom, in the now deserted mansion of Tyrone, the property of the French St. George family, is a marble monument, formerly in the old parish church, and intended to be placed in the new, bearing this inscription':—

Sacred to the memory of the Right Hon. Lady Harriet St. George, wife of Arthur French St. George, of Tyrone, Esq. and eldest daughter of William, Earl of Howth, by Mary, second daughter of Thomas, Earl of Louth, Baron of Athenry, and Premier Baron of Ireland, who, in the 48th year of her age terminated a religious life on the 3rd of February 1830. Her unbounded love of God, her high sense of honour, her scrupulous integrity and extensive benevolence secured the attachment of her friends, and the love of her own family. A disconsolate husband has erected this monument to the object of his tenderest affections.

'This is a small burial-ground, surrounded by a low ditch, which lies near the public road, inside Mr. Medicott's demesne. With the exception of a couple of quite modern white marble crosses, erected to the memory of members of the Medicott family, there is only one inscribed tombstone in the burial-ground. Castle Inch, or Inchyolaghan.

' Archdall's edition of Lodge's "Peerage of Ireland" (vol. vi, p. 57) states that Joseph Cuffe, of Castle Inch, took up arms in 1649 under Oliver Cromwell. He married Martha, daughter of Colonel Agmondisham Muschamp, by whom he had twenty children. He died at his seat of Castle Inch, and was buried in a vault within that church, which he had prepared for himself and posterity, upon the stone whereof is this memorial ' :—

Kilkenny, the Franciscan Abbey.

[From Mr. Francis Joseph Bigger.]

‘Supporting the groined roof of the tower of the Franciscan Abbey in Kilkenny are six figures, unique in Irish architecture. Each figure represents a monkish subject, differently costumed, in different attitudes, supporting the burden, and that not without a touch of humour. No. 1 represents weariness: the subject is “done up,” with hands upon knees; his head inclined. This figure is the most weather-worn. No. 2 depicts the body pressed down, the hands between the knees as a last effort to sustain the burden. No. 3 depicts courage, and a bold effort to take, with the upraised arms, the burden off the shoulders. No. 4 shows the right hand helping the left in a strong effort not to be overborne. No. 5 is almost despair and collapse, the weary head and bowed back, the hands pressed tight against the knees. No. 6 shows discretion, one hand on knee, the other hand to the head, with a sustained appearance of strength. They are all certainly very human in their symbolic characterization. The photo is from casts, carefully made for me, by Mícheál O’Ouibhín, of Kilkenny, and I have used the stoutly made casts in supporting the timber beams in the restored banquet-hall of Castle Shane at Ardglass, County Down.’

Knocktopher Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘On the opposite page is shown a double-effigied tomb, which, Lady Langrishe writes, was dug up near the abbey during some planting operations in October, 1910.

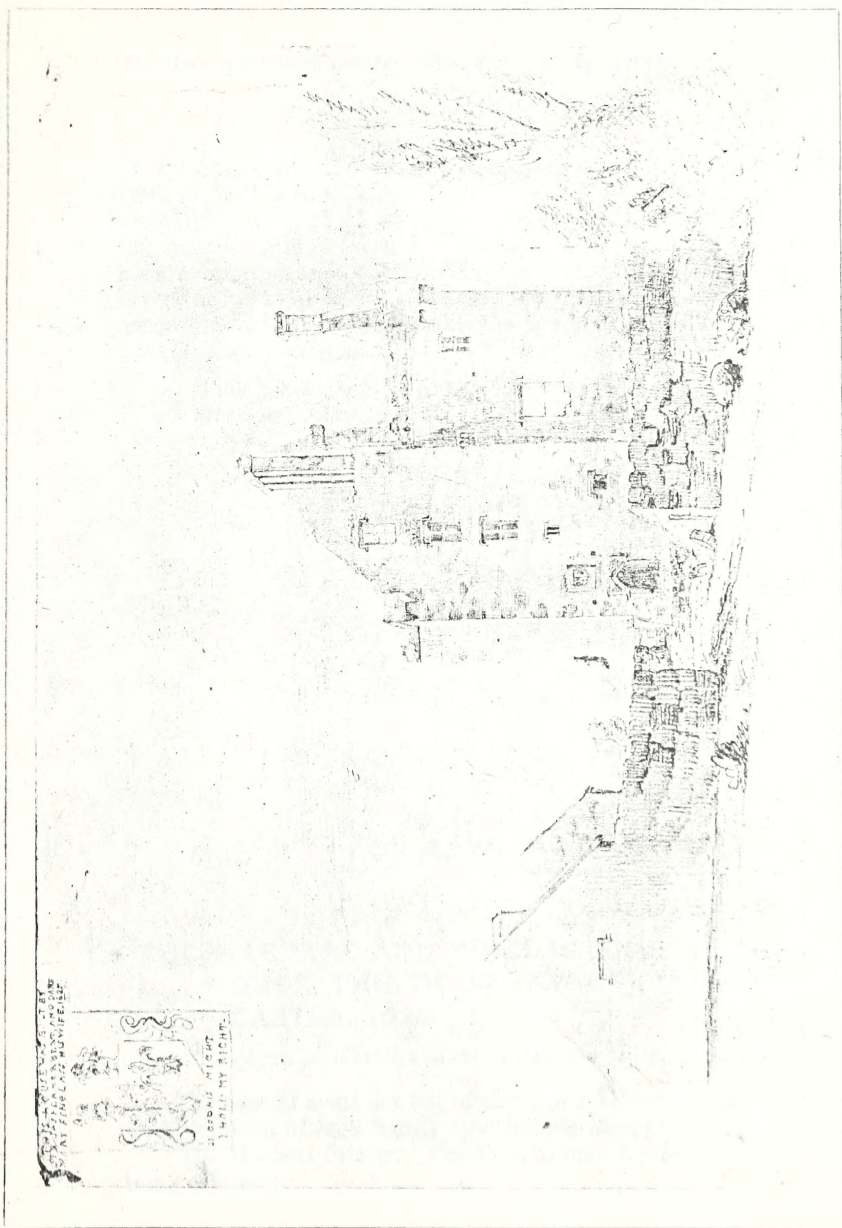

‘There is no inscription. The figures, in the costume of the early fifteenth century, are those of a civilian and his wife, very probably benefactors of the abbey. The lady has a peculiar hood on her head, though attached to no cloak.

‘The male figure has close-cropped, curly hair, and wears a small moustache, not visible in the photograph.

‘The illustration was made from a photograph by P. G. Lee, kindly supplied for the JOURNAL by Lady Langrishe.

‘The Carmelite Abbey of Knocktopher was founded in 1356.’

BALLYCOWAN CASTLE IN THE KING'S COUNTY.

[From an old drawing in the possession of Mr. Stanley F. Coote.]

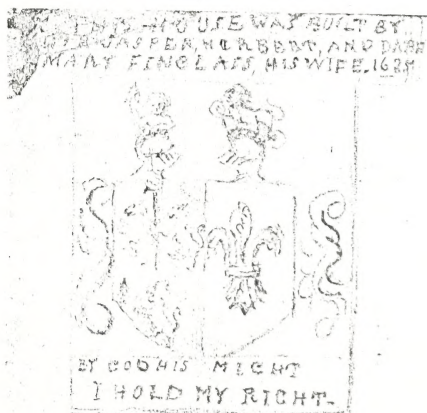

KING'S COUNTY.

Ballycowan Castle. Parish of Kilbride.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The ruins of this castle are extensive, and stand close to the Grand Canal, two and a half miles to the west of Tullamore. The Irish form of the name is "Baile mhic Abhainn." Over its pointed arched doorway, which at the battlements is defended by a projecting machicolation, there is a handsome, well-cut coat-of-arms in high relief, and on a small slab, resting on the framework above it, is cut an inscription, which is too high up to be legible; but which, according to Terry MacDonnell, the son of the tenant who lives in the thatched house close to the castle, runs as follows':—

THIS HOVSE WAS BVILT BY SIR IASPER HARBERT K^T AND HIS WIFE DAME MARY FINGLAS IN THE YEAR 1626.

THE HARBERT AND FINGLAS ARMS ON A SLAB
OVER THE DOORWAY OF BALLYCOWAN CASTLE, 1626.

[From an old sketch in the possession of Mr. S. V. Coote.]

'The coat-of-arms consist of those of Harbert impaling Finglas, with the crest of each family on a helmet above their arms, viz.:—

'The Harbert family. Crest: a human figure. Arms: Three lions rampant.

IN THE KING'S COUNTY.

[From a rubbing by Lord Walter FitzGerald, 1813.]

'The Finglas family. Crest: an animal [? a bear]. Arms: a fleur-de-lys.

'Handsome "diapering" falls on either side of the shield. On a scroll is cut the legend':—

BY . GOD . OF . MIGHT
I . HOLD . MY . RIGHT.

'Nothing appears to be known of Sir Jasper Harbert and his family, except that his elder brother was Sir Edward Harbert, Kt., of Durrow Abbey, not far from Tullamore, and that they were the sons of Nicholas Harbert of Monasteroris and Durrow Abbey, who was the son of Sir Francis Harbert of Cutlandstown, alias Ballycotlan, now Coghlanstown, in the County Kildare.

Rahan Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The so-called "Abbey" of Rahan is an exceedingly ugly Protestant church undergoing (1913) repairs, principally with the aid of yellow brick, though there is plenty of limestone about. The only redeeming feature about it externally is the beautifully carved old circular window high up in the gable at the east end, and below which a new doorway-like round-arched window, reaching to the ground-level, has been inserted, which would not have been out of place as an entrance at the west end.

'There are the ruins of two side chapels, attached to, and one on either side of, the chancel.

'The large O'Molloy slab of 1683, discovered under the floor of the church during the repairs, is now built into the north wall of the nave at the back of the pulpit; a sketch of it is given on p. 579, vol. viii of the JOURNAL; it is not improved by having been painted the same colour as the walls.

'Over the very plain round-headed west doorway, disproportionately narrow for its height, is a stone on which is cut':—

I.M.
1732.

'The levelling of some of the enclosures, during the repairs, has brought to light the small fragment of an Irish inscribed slab bearing a ringed Celtic cross; owing to its fragmentary state, the mortar still adhering to it, and ill-usage, only a letter or two are decipherable. For safety, and to prevent its again being used as building material, I placed it (April, 1913) in a conspicuous position, leaning against the west end of the church. This fragment measures 16 inches across and the same in length.

'What have apparently also been discovered in some demolished wall, are two portions of a quite plain shaft of a limestone cross; there are more or less indistinct traces of badly cut incised Roman capital letters on them, which I made out as follows':—

THIS
MADE FORR
EESSE
CEI ..
...

O DOMI
1616
CARVED-BY CORMACK-O
BOGHALIE

'These fragments are placed near the railway sleeper steps on the right as one approaches the west doorway. Not far from them are two pieces of the upper end of a large slab bearing an eight-armed cross of crude design, in relief, and probably not older than the beginning of the seventeenth century. Under an arm on the left of the slab are four initials in raised Roman capitals thus':—

BOOB

'The tombstones in the burial-ground are of no particular interest; the two earliest appear to be those given below':—

Creevelea Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The extensive ruins of the Franciscan Abbey of Creevelea, now a National Monument, stand on the opposite bank of the Bonet River to the village of Drumahaire; it is said to have been founded by the O'Rourkes in 1508. As far as sixteenth-century inscriptions go, there are none to be seen, and, strange to say, no tombs now exist earlier than the eighteenth century.

'The following four inscriptions occur in the choir.

'On a flat sunken slab':—

RESTORED
BY REV^D CORMAC M^CSHARRY, P.P.

1883.

‘Canon Carrigan, P.P., has kindly reconstructed the Latin portion of the inscription with the following translation’ :—

Filius atque regum princeps Thadaeus triumphis Regna petens coeli despiciensque soli.

‘I.e.—Teige (or Thady) descendant and spiritual director of kings, has succeeded in gaining a heavenly, and in contemning an earthly, kingdom.

‘Canon Carrigan adds that he imagines that if Father M^CSharry caused this table-tomb to be erected, he must have got the old inscription copied out as ‘closely as he could ; or possibly he may have got the inscription re-cut, and the errors in the Latin would be caused by the ignorance of the stone-cutter so employed.

‘Mr. John R. Garstin states that, according to Brady’s “Episcopal Succession,” vol. ii, p. 178, the See of Killala, after having been long vacant, was filled by the appointment of Thaddeus Francis O’Rourke, a Franciscan. He was consecrated in Dublin in August, 1707. His successor in September, 1735, was Peter Archdeken, who was consecrated on the 5th of February following at Prague.’

Drumlease Graveyard.

[From Mr. H. S. Crawford.]

‘The old graveyard of Drumlease is situated about three-quarters of a mile south-east of the village of Drumahaire. Protestants only are buried in it, the Roman Catholics being interred at Creevelea Abbey. The burials have practically ceased, the graveyard surrounding the modern church at Drumahaire being used instead. There are thirty-two stones at Drumlease, some having unusually long and well-cut inscriptions. Five of these monuments, including three modern ones, are upright; the others are large, horizontal slabs. The earliest date (1735) appears on the Carter slab (No. 22), which commemorates seven persons.’

THE ARMS OF THE RIGHT REV. JOHN YOUNG, BISHOP OF LIMERICK, ON HIS TOMB-SLAB IN
THE CHURCHYARD AT SINGLAND, 1813.

[From a photograph by Dr. G. Fogerty, R.N.]

This Monument was erected at the Expence of the Parish Clergymen of this Diocefe to the memory of R^t Rev. John Young R.C.B. of Limerick who depart^d this life on the 23^d day of September 1813 in the 68th year of his age and twentieth year of his episcopal Dignity. His life was truly exemplary and apostolical he was remarkable for his Piety charity and profound learning humble and mortified in his manner of life. He sought only the honour and Glory of God and not the things of this life he died regretted by his Clergymen to whom he was a Faithful Instructor and lamented by the poor to whom he was a Parent and Protector. May his Soul rest in peace.

COUNTY LONGFORD.

Clongesh Churchyard.

'This old churchyard lies in the demesne of Castle Forbes. The following inscription appears on a modern monument':—

I. H. S.

Of your charity pray for the soul of Thomas Hanna, for many years Harper to the Earl and Countess of Granard. Died Nov^r 3rd 1869 Aged 67 years.

'Thomas Hanna was for upwards of fifteen years living as Harper to the family of the Earl and Countess of Granard at Castle Forbes, where he died, and was interred in the old graveyard of Clongesh, where the late Lord Granard erected a tablet to his memory. He was one of the harpers who played at O'Connell's Monster Meeting at Tara in 1843. His harp is still at Castle Forbes.'

Cloondara Churchyard, Parish of Killashee.

[From Captain E. E. West.]

'Built into the wall surrounding the burial-ground of the Roman Catholic church at Cloondara, on the road between Longford and Strokestown, is a slab bearing the following inscription':—

Stay pafsenger
See where I lie
As you are now
So once was I;
As I am now, so Shall you be,
Prepare for death
And Follow me.

years, and of Margaret Clinch their daughter with four more of their children. Patrick Marron, of Drogheda, erected this stone anno 1790 in memory of said Richard his Father-in-law, of the others above mentioned, and of 14 of his own children here interred.

‘Large altar-tomb, in ruined chancel, with arms of Genet impaling Blake (?), and below the initials I. G. On either side of the shield, and running parallel to the sides of the slab, are the following lines’ :—

ALL · PEOPLE · THAT · ON · EARTH ·
DRAW · BREATH ·
IN · HEALTH · PREPARE · FOR · THE · HOUR
OF · DEATH.

‘Above and below the shield is the following’ :—

..... TH . . . THE
..... JOHN · GENET
..... RIDGE . . .
THIS · TOMBE · WHO DEPARTED
THIS · LIFE · 1690 (?)
THE · POORE · THE · WORLDE · THE HEAVENS · AND · THE · GRAVE · HIS · ALMES · HIS · PRAISE · HIS · SOULE · AND · BODIE · HAVE ·

‘This curious monument is evidently to John Genet, of Oldbridge, referred to in the previous inscription. The charge on the impaled shield is not quite clear, but appears to be a fret, so the arms are possibly those of Blake. To obtain its proper meaning the last four lines of the epitaph should be read thus :—

‘The Poore have his Almes,
The Worlde has his Praise,
The Heavens have his Soule, and
The Grave has his Bodie.’

Here lieth the body of John Nardin who died 4 January 1764, aged 68 years. Erected by his wife Margaret Nardin.

Erected by M^{rs} Catherine Moore to the memory of her beloved husband M^r Thomas Moore, late of James street, Dublin, Tanner, who departed this life 10 June 1827, aged 37 years. Here lieth the remains of M^{rs} Susanna Walle, wife to M^r Bartholomew Walle, of Dublin, Tanner. She departed this life 31 May 1836, aged 80 years.

Susan Moore died 1 June 1848.

Dowth Churchyard.

[From Mr. Nicholas J. Synnott.]

‘In addition to the tombstones of the Netterville family mentioned in a previous number of the JOURNAL (1910, vol. viii, pp. 140, 141), I have to report that there is a flat grey stone in the old churchyard at Dowth, bearing the following inscription’ :—

Pray for the repose of the soul of

Robert William Netterville of Cruicerath in the County Meath Esquire whose remains are here deposited.

He departed this life at Brussels in Belgium on the 12th day of July
in the year of Our Lord 1834.

This Monument is Erected by his son Arthur James Netterville of Cruicerath.

‘Arthur James Netterville, of Cruicerath, who erected this tombstone, claimed to succeed to the Viscounty of Netterville in July, 1861, upon the death, without male issue, of James, 7th Viscount Netterville. Arthur James was the son of Robert William Netterville above mentioned, by Mary, daughter of John Bernard, of Ballyaggar (?), in the County of Kerry.

‘At the proceedings before the Committee of Privileges, which lasted until 1867, Arthur James Netterville proved his descent from Robert Netterville, of Cruicerath, the fourth son of the 1st Viscount; and finally on the 26th July, 1867, it was adjudged that the petitioner had made out his claim to succeed as 8th Viscount Netterville of Dowth.

‘He died without male issue in 1882, when the peerage became extinct.

‘This house at Cruicerath, which had been the seat of this branch of the family since the middle of the seventeenth century, had become dilapidated at the time of the hearing of the petition, 1861–67. This Cruicerath is in the Barony of Duleek, County Meath. There is another house and townland called Cruicerath, in the Barony of Castleknock, County Dublin.

'I am informed by a recent visitor that the marble effigy and bust of the monument in the chancel, Dowth Church, have fallen, and are lying broken on the ground. I am not sure whether the custody of this Church and monuments lies with the Trustees of the Netterville Charity or with the local District Council.'

Slane Castle Demesne, St. Erc's Hermitage.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The ruins of what are known as "St. Erc's Hermitage" are situated in Lord Conyngham's demesne, on the north bank of the Boyne. Of these ruins there is no trace of the original building, as what exist now belong to mediæval times. They consist of a very dilapidated narrow building, divided in two by a tower, vaulted high up. A dwelling addition is attached to the south side of the tower, also very ruinous.

'In the eastern portion of the building stands a large altar-tomb against the north wall; near it is a displaced large flag, revealing an entrance to a vault. The inscriptions (in incised capitals) on the covering slab and on the front of the tomb have already appeared (with a few errors in the spelling) in the JOURNAL, vol. i, p. 465, though more correctly in vol. iii, p. 326. A large coat-of-arms, with coronet, and supporters (for Randall Fleming, Baron of Slane), is carved at the upper end of the covering slab; and a small shield, bearing the Moore and Spencer Arms impaled, is inserted in the middle of the first three lines of the inscription on the front of the tomb.

'There are no other tombstones in or near these ruins.

'The pointed arched doorways, and the windows, are ornamented with foliage, sculpturing, and finials.

'There is a fragment of the shaft of an old cross, placed in one of the windows of the eastern chapel; it is covered with figures of the saints.

'On another stone, placed in a niche of the western chapel, is carved the representation of St. Catherine, with the spiked wheel of her martyrdom; and by the side of the footpath, a bit above and to the west of the ruins, is a large squared boulder, bearing at one end the crucifixion, and on the longer sides small figures of the saints in relief on a plain background devoid of panels.

'Between Lord Slane's castellated residence and St. Erc's Hermitage is a well dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and called "Lady Well"; its waters are conveyed down to the Boyne by a covered-in shore, and close to the river there is a small portion uncovered to which, on the 15th August, the people resort, the gates of the demesne being left open to admit them on that day.'

QUEEN'S COUNTY.

Dysart (Enos) Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

· 'This churchyard lies three miles to the east of Maryborough; it is known as Dysart, but gives the name of Dysart Enos to the parish. It was founded by St. Aengus (or Enos), the Culdee, who was venerated on the 11th of March. An unroofed Protestant church stands in the churchyard; it contains no features of interest, and the arched windows of brick, as well as the church tower, show its construction to belong to recent times.

'There are no tombstones of either age or interest; the inscriptions which follow are among the earliest in the surrounding graveyard.'

'Flat slab':—

'There is leaning lengthways against the church wall at the south-west corner a large slab bearing, at the top, a coat-of-arms in relief, viz.: Two chevrons; and a crest—a squirrel sejant.

'Owing to the position of the slab, the left side is buried some inches in the ground. What is legible reads':—

COUNTY SLIGO.

Sligo Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The Dominican Abbey in the town of Sligo is stated to have been founded by Maurice FitzGerald, Second Baron of Offaly, and Lord Justice of Ireland, in the year 1252. Very extensive remains still exist, and the Abbey is now a National Monument, and closed against further interments. The cloisters are thickly packed with tombstones. This place can only boast of a high altar, and three or four sepulchral monuments, of a date previous to the eighteenth century. The latter are the O'Connor-Sligo mural monument of 1624; a slab bearing a Lombardic inscription of the fifteenth century; the O'Crean recessed altar-tomb of 1506, and O'Crean coats-of-arms-bearing mural tablets dated 1616 and 1625.

'The High Altar is richly carved, the front being divided into panels, with ornamental foliage designs of the fifteenth century. The top is composed of several slabs, on which (not now in their correct order) are cut the words, far apart:—

the lettering is in raised Lombardic characters, and over the "me" is a design of crosses composed of interlacing bands. The upper portion is missing.

'The O'Connor-Sligo mural monument is placed in a built-up window on the south side of the high altar. It was erected in 1624; the inscription appears on p. 431 of volume viii of the JOURNAL. As is seen in the illustration opposite, it is surmounted by a figure of our Lord crucified, with St. Peter on the left, and St. Paul on the right; between them are the O'Connor-Sligo crest: a (?) lion statant; coat-of-arms: an oak-tree; and the motto: QVO . VINCI . VINCOR.

'Above the two kneeling figures there are three shields. The one on the left bears the O'Connor-Sligo arms—the tree. The middle one bears a boar (?the crest of the Desmond FitzGerald, see further on); and the right-hand shield bears two coats-of-arms impaled, viz.: in the dexter half "a chief indented," and, in the sinister half, "three covered cups," both of them Butler Arms.

'The kneeling figures represent Sir Donogh O'Connor-Sligo in armour, with his helmet behind him; he died in 1609. The coroneted lady was his wife, Elenor Butler, daughter of Edmund, 12th Baron of Dunboyne, and widow of Gerald FitzGerald, 15th Earl of Desmond (who was slain in 1583). She erected this tomb in 1624, and died in 1636.

'On the panel below the kneeling figures runs the inscription (see vol. viii, p. 431), cut in very lightly incised capital letters.

'The Lombardic lettered slab lies close to the south wall of the choir. It measures 5 feet 9 inches in length, and in breadth, at the top, 16 inches; at the foot, 20 inches. At the upper end there is an inscription in five lines; below it the Crucifixion, with the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. John on either side of the cross; then comes a mythological winged animal—a griffin; and, below that again, an ornamental device. All the sculptures on the slab are in relief; but they are now so faint as not to be discernible, unless rubbed over with juicy herbage.

'Strange to say, the narrow end of the slab is the upper end. It probably belongs to the fifteenth century, and served as a covering slab to a burial in the floor of the choir.

'The inscription is barely legible, and, unfortunately, the names can only be guessed at, though the surname resembles no name of modern times.* A possible reading is:—

HIC IACE
T UORDE..
McCATAUEL
Y QUI ME FIE
FECIT

I.e., Hic iacet Uorde . . McCatauely, qui me fie[ri] fecit.

'In vol. i, p. 235, of our JOURNAL a sketch of this slab is given, taken from Colonel Wood-Martin's "History of Sligo," in which he gives an imaginary reading of the inscription, and describes the griffin as a camel! A rubbing of this slab is given on the opposite page.

'The O'Creehan Monument consists of an altar-tomb, placed in a handsome canopied recess in the north wall of the nave; the front of the altar-tomb is divided into nine ogee-headed panels, richly ornamented; eight of these panels each contain a

* Judging by the Christian name, apparently Jordan, this individual was probably an Anglo-Irishman, whose family had assumed a Celtic equivalent for their surname, as in the case of the Stauntons, who became MacAveely, or MacEvilly.

saint, and one the Crucifixion ; starting on the left as one faces the tomb, the saints represent' :—

1. St. Dominic.
2. St. Catherine, with her wheel, and a sword.
3. A female saint, with a spear in her right hand, and a book in the left.
4. The Blessed Virgin Mary.
5. The Crucifixion.
6. St. John.
7. St. Michael the Archangel, holding a sword and a cross-bearing shield.
8. St. Peter, with two keys.
9. A bishop, a cross-topped staff in his left hand; his right hand raised in the blessing-giving posture.

'The three covering slabs of the tomb do not belong to it; two of them bear an incised eighteenth-century inscription; the third slab is unlettered. What is left of the inscription reads' :—

Here Lyeth the Body of M^r Patric^k [. . . who] Departed this Life y^e 3rd day of Aug^t [17. . . aged] 80 years.

'Just below the covering slabs, where they project, and along the top of the panelled front slab of the tomb, is a one-lined inscription in Lombardic lettering; some of the letters are completely chipped away; and, in its present condition, the inscription reads' :—

HIC · [] ET CORMACUS · OCRAIAN · ET ·
[] EHON [] · I [] ENOASA ·
UXOR · EI? · AN^o DOⁱ M^o CCCCC^o VI^o

'Mr. M. J. McEnery, of the Dublin Record Office, has very kindly restored the missing letters (as shown in the "rubbing" annexed), and has supplied the following reading and translation' :—

HIC IACET CORMACUS OCRAIAN ET GEHONNA
INI AENOASA UXOR EIUS etc.

'I.e. Here lies Cormac O'Crean and Johanna Ennis his wife,
A.D. 1506.

To face page 159.]

THE O'CREAN ALTAR-TOMB IN SLIGO ABBEY, 1506.

[From a photograph by Mr. R. Welch, M.R.I.A.]

'Mr. M'Enery, in his remarks on this inscription, writes :—

"O'Craian is represented in Irish by O'Craidheain. See the Annals of Ulster, where Father MacCarthy translates it O'Craean."

"Ini Aenoasa" is represented by "Ni Aenghusa," or "Ni Oenghusa," which he translates O'Hennessy. If my reading be correct, the inscription is very interesting, as it shows Ini an intermediate form between Inghean and Ni, meaning daughter of.

'As Ni is the female form of Mac or O, the wife's maiden name might have been either :—

1. M'Guinness, a sept connected with the north-east of Ireland.
2. O'Hennessy, connected with the middle and south ; or
3. Ennis, connected with the west and north-west.

'For these reasons I would prefer Ennis as the surname of the wife's family.

'Colonel Wood-Martin, in his "History of Sligo," has an absolutely imaginary restoration of the wife's name, which unfortunately was reproduced in vol. i, p. 232, of our JOURNAL.

'By a strange error this O'Craean inscription is described as being cut in "Irish capitals" on p. 473, vol. vi, Fourth Series (1884), of the "Journal of Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland."

'Built into the wall, at the back of the recess, is a slab bearing the date 1616, and the following arms and text :—

'Crest :—A demi-wolf, holding between its fore-paws a heart.

'Arms :—The O'Craean, impaling those of French, viz., for O'Craean :—"Argent, a wolf rampant sable, between three human hearts gules." For French :—"Ermine, a chevron sable."*

'Initials on either side of the Arms :—A. C. (Andrew Craean) and E. F. (E . . . French).

'Text below the shield bearing the arms' :—

COR MVNDVM CREA IN ME DEVS, ET SPIRITVS RECTVM INNOVA, IN VISCERIBVS MEIS.

'This text is taken from Psalm li. 12, and was possibly selected owing to the play on the surname in the first line.

'There are two other portions of this seventeenth-century O'Craean monument, now widely separated ; one is a small tablet bearing the O'Craean arms in relief, with the initials A. C. ; it is placed on the high altar ; the corresponding tablet to it, bearing the French family arms on a lozenge, and the initials I (? E) · F, is now, strange to relate, built into the front of the altar at the blessed well of Tobernaltha,† two miles away to the south-east of the town.'

* Kindly identified by Mr. G. D. Burchaell, Athlone Pursuivant-of-Arms.

† See vol. viii, p. 627.

'In the sunk ground, at the base of the O'Crian altar-tomb, is a slab showing faint traces of an inscription in raised Roman capitals; and on higher ground close to the tomb is a flat slab with a double coat-of-arms, and an inscription in raised Roman capitals. The sculpturing shows:—

'A crest:—A half moon.

'Arms:—Crawford impaling Audley, viz., for Crawford:—
"Gules, a fess ermine, between three mullets argent."

'For Audley:—"Gules, a fret or." [Motto quite illegible. The inscription runs thus:—

PRAY FOR THE SOVL OF WILL IAM CRAFFORD WHO LIVED IN FARNICARNY AND DYED SEP
TEMBER THE SE COND ANNO DO
MINI 1706 SARA
AVDLY BEING

[Never completed.]

'There is one other O'Crian coat-of-arms bearing mural slab; it is placed, resting on a modern box-tomb, in a recess of the south wall of the choir. The date 1625 is cut above the coats-of-arms, O'Crian impaling Jones, and below occurs the following verse':—

[From Mr. Thomas U. Sadleir.]

‘Large marble tablet in chancel of parish church’ :—

Sacred to the memory of Thomas Sadleir Esq. and Margaret Watson, his wife. The latter died 16 August 1817, aged 41 years; the former 22 October 1842, aged 68 years. He was eldest son of Thomas Sadleir Esq. of Castletown, Barister-at-Law, who was sole male representative of Thomas Sadleir Esq. of Sopwell Hall, and his wife Margaret Oliver,* of Kilmallock. “As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.” This tablet is erected by their children.

‘Marble tablet set in slate on wall of ruined chancel’ :—

Sacred to the memory of Mary Trench, wife of Francis Trench Esq. of Sopwell Hall, and daughter of James Mason Esq. of Shrewsbury, whose remains are deposited in the vault beneath. She departed this life on the 18th of December 1815 in the 38th year of her age, leaving behind her four sons and three daughters. This marble is placed here by her husband as a tribute to her excellence, but more especially that her Infant children when they shall have attained a more mature age may approach the spot with reverencial awe, and pledge their vows to Heaven to respect her memory by imitating her virtues.

‘On tablet opposite’ :—

In memory of Francis Trench, of Sopwell Hall, Esquire (grandson of Francis Sadleir, Esquire, of the same place) who died 25th of November 1829. Their remains rest in the Sopwell vault beneath.

* This lady's name is given wrongly. She was Frances, daughter of Captain Robert Oliver, of Clonodfoy, near Kilmallock.

INSCRIPTIONS ON COMMUNION PLATE.

‘On chalice’ :—

The Gift of Tho. Sadler, Esq. to Balingary Church,
Nov^{ber} 1715.

‘On paten : same inscription, in a circle.’

Borrisnafarney Parish Church.

TABLETS IN THE CHURCH.

‘White marble tablet, surmounted by the family arms : “Gules, on a chevron argent, between three demi-lions rampant, or, as many grains of pepper proper, in chief a trefoil slipped of the second.” Crest, a demi-lion rampant or ; and motto, “Fortes fortuna jubat.”’

Sacred to the memory of Thomas Ryder Pepper, of Loughton Esq. ob. 15 December 1828, aet. 58. In life respected and beloved ; in death lamented. A true and sincere friend, a faithful and affectionate husband, a pious and devoted Christian. He lived to Christ his Saviour, and now he sleeps in Jesus, waiting the resurrection morn. His mourning widow has caused this tablet to be erected, in a church of which he was the founder, as a testimony of her ardent and unalterable affection, and of his numerous and exalted virtues.

‘Immediately beneath is a marble tablet’ :—

Sacred to the beloved memory of Anne, relict of Thomas Ryder Pepper Esq. of Loughton, died April 7, 1841, aged 68 years. “Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.”

‘Sandstone tablet with Gothic frame’ :—

Sacred to the memory of Benjamin Bloomfield, Baron Bloomfield, of Oakhampton and Redwood, County Tipperary, G.C.B., G.C.G. a Lieut-General in the Army, Col. Commandant of the Royal Horse Artillery, Governor of Fort Charles, Jamaica, and a Privy Councillor. He held the distinguished and confidential offices of Clerk Marshal, Private Secretary and Privy Purse to H.R.H.

the Prince of Wales, afterwards George the IV ; he was for nine years Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Sweden, and subsequently Commandant at Woolwich. He was born 13 April 1768, and died beloved and lamented 15 August 1846. With loyalty and patriotism unbounded, save by his allegiance to the King of Kings he devoted himself through life to the public welfare "not slothful in business but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." In him was found that wisdom from above, which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits without partiality and without hypocrisy. And to the praise of God be it recorded that in the midst of prosperity and worldly honours which he ever acknowledged with heartfelt gratitude his glorying was in the Cross of Christ Jesus Our Saviour. "Blessed are the Dead which die in the Lord."—Rev^s. xiv. 13.

the pedigree places in their order the members of the family whose births and deaths are vouched for by the tombstone inscriptions; and this allocation is rendered easy by the fact that, in nearly every case, each branch of the family has a separate tombstone.

I am informed that in the compilation of the pedigree facts not specially recorded on the tombstones were obtained from James Browne, who was born in 1734.

What is, perhaps, more important than mere family tradition is the fact that there has always been a strong belief in the neighbourhood that the family we are dealing with were descended from the original owners of Mulrankin.* The probability of the correctness of the tradition is increased from the undoubted fact that this family has never ceased to inhabit these lands since the original proprietors were dispossessed.

It is to be noted that whilst the family claim descent from the second son of the Patrick Browne who died 1637, his Christian name as given in the pedigree is John, whereas the Funeral Certificate in Ulster's office gives the name of the second son as Walter. There is no strict proof available at present that the second son married, and that he had a son named Patrick Browne, so that this pedigree is submitted quantum valeat, though, from the circumstances previously stated and the fact that the pedigree was first prepared in the life-time of a man who was born in 1734, and was therefore of mature age long before the death of his father, Michael Browne, who was the son and grandson respectively of the two persons in the pedigree as to whom proof is not forthcoming, there seems a fair presumption that it is substantially correct.†

I notice that Mr. Philip Hore in his History of the County Wexford (Ferns, etc., p. 332) accepts the local and family tradition, and states that the present R. C. Bishop of Ferns, the Most Rev. James Browne, D.D. (who is noticed in the pedigree), comes from the Mulrankin family.

* The author of a series of articles on the Castles of Wexford, which appeared in the Wexford People newspaper in 1889-90, stated that "the late Most Rev. James Browne, Bishop of Kilmore (see pedigree), one of the Mulrankin Brownes, used to relate that his father, when young, remembered seeing the then representative of the Brownes of Mulrankin riding on a grey pony about the parish. He was then an old man and much respected by the people." The author adds that Rathronan was then (1890) the property of one of the descendants of the former owners, Michael Browne, Bridgetown. I am informed that the author of the above-mentioned articles was a Mr. Edward O'Cullen, editor of the People, who went to great pains examining and verifying local traditions.

† In the "History of Duncannon Fort," by Mr. Philip Hore, p. 66, reference is made to the Depositions (now in T.C.D.) of 1641-1642; and according to Mr. Hore's summary, amongst those present at the siege of Duncannon were "Colonel John Browne," and "Lieut. Walter Browne, brother to Col. John Browne of Mulrankin."

In the list of inscriptions given on pp. 392-394, I have placed a number for each tombstone, and a corresponding number on the particular entries in the pedigree which are vouched for by inscriptions on the tombstones, some of which have entries covering several generations.

I am indebted to the late Mr. Michael Browne, who died in August, 1912, and Miss Kathleen Browne, of Rathronan, for copies of the inscriptions and pedigree, also for other information as to their family.

NOTES.

A Guthrie Tombstone, removed from Scotland to Castle MacGarrett, County Mayo, in 1907.

'The following description and particulars of a Guthrie tombstone, now at Castle MacGarrett, have been supplied by Lord Oranmore and Browne.

'At the top of the stone is a shield bearing the arms of Guthrie of Guthrie, viz., "Or, a lion rampant gules."

'On either side of the shield are the initials J. G. and J. H., standing for John Guthrie (son of George Guthrie), and Janet Howie, his wife.

'Then follows the inscription' :—

THIS IS THE BURIAL PLACE OF
GEORGE GUTHRIE IN SIDE HEAD
WHO DIED SEPTEMBER 21ST 1712
AGED 76 YEARS & ISOBALD HEWIE
HIS SPOUSE DIED APRIL 1692 AG^D 40.
John Gutrie seniur dyd Mar. 4 1743 ag^d 54 his son John dyd J^y 21 1735 Ag^d 5. James dyd May 1 1743 ag^d 11. Jean dyd Oct^r 3 1737 ag^d 11. Elizth dyd Mar. 24 1743 Ag^d 8.
Janet dyd Mar. 19 1743 Ag^d 1.

'Under the inscription is represented a man driving a plough with four horses, which are being led by another man.

'On the other side of the tombstone is a representation of Adam and Eve standing under the Tree of Knowledge, round which the serpent is coiled.

'“As the stone was mouldering away my maternal grandfather erected another in its place in Craigie Churchyard, and removed the old one to The Mount in Ayrshire; and when that was sold in 1907, I again removed it to Castle MacGarrett"; a tablet thus records the removal':—

'On front cover inside':—

My Son John Born y^e 15th day of November 1715.

My Son George was born y^e 26 of Oct^r 1717.

My Daughter Jean was born Feb^{ry} 26, 1719.

My Daughter Eliz. was born Feb^{ry} 10, 1721.

My Son Charles was born March 17, 1723.

My Daughter Martha was born April y^e 22, 1725.

My Son Robert was born August 1727.

My Daughter Catherine born Dec^r y^e 22, 1728.

My Daughter Jant (?) born Feb^r 19, 1729.

[These entries relate to the children of Richard Farran, of Dublin. The book appears to have belonged to his son Charles, whose birth is here given, and to have subsequently passed to Harriet Farran, the latter's granddaughter, who in 1829 married John Harvey.]

Note on George Warburton, whose Tomb-slab lies in Kentstown Churchyard, County Meath.

'The Rev. H. B. Swanzy has kindly identified the above George Warburton, whose tombstone inscription has appeared on p. 608, vol. viii, of the JOURNAL. He writes that this':—

George Warburton was younger, but longest survivor, of the sons of John Warburton, M.P. for Belturbet, 1692-3 and 1695-9, Six Clerk in Chancery, by Mary, daughter of Matthew French, of Belturbet, County Cavan, and High Sheriff of that County in 1677.

George Warburton was Master in Chancery, married in 1720, Hannah Smith. By his will, proved 20th February, 1731, he desires to be buried in Kentstown. His only surviving daughter, Mary, married, in 1740, Sir Quaile Somerville, Bart., and was ancestor of the Athlunney family.

George Warburton was baptized at St. Nicholas' Within, Dublin, on the 20th May, 1681, and died 1st December, 1730, so must have been in his forty-ninth year.

MISCELLANEA.

Concerning the Browne Family, who are interred at Mayglass, and whose tombstone inscriptions are given on pages 392-394.

[By Mr. Nicholas J. Synnott.]

The churchyard of Mayglass, or Maglass ("Green Plain," according to Joyce) is situate in the Barony of Forth, eight miles from the town of Wexford, on the road to Kilmore, and about two miles from Bridgetown. In the churchyard are the ruins of an old church (dedicated to St. Fintan, venerated on the 17th February), of which there are a short description and drawing in the "Dublin Penny Journal" for 1834-5, p. 276, showing a remarkable arched doorway which still stands.* In the neighbourhood are two old castles—Mulrankin, situate about half a mile to the east of Bridgetown village; and Rathronan, situate about a mile to the north, both formerly belonging to a family named Browne, of which Rathronan was the junior branch. Rathronan Castle has been restored, and is now inhabited by the family of Browne, whose progenitors and relations are buried in Mayglass Churchyard, and who claim descent from the Brownes of Mulrankin.

In Petty's survey of the parish in 1653, mention is made of three castles, "the third castle out of repair." Probably the last-mentioned is Bridgetown Castle, formerly the home of the Keatings, of which I believe there is a drawing in Du Noyer's Sketch Book.† There is no doubt that the family of Browne (formerly le Brun) had been settled at Mulrankin from very early times, probably from the Norman invasion. William le Brun and his son Nicholas were witnesses to the charter to Dunbrody Abbey in 1175 ("History of County Wexford," by Philip Hore, "Dunbrody," p. 40); and there is constant mention of the name in the "Patent and Close

* It was in a ruinous condition, until restored in 1914 by subscriptions collected by Miss Kathleen Browne, of Bridgetown.

There are also drawings by Wakeman of this church in the Ordnance Survey papers. See "Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, Ireland," 1870-1, p. 505.

"The Dublin Penny Journal" (above cited) states that Bagenal Harvey, who commanded the rebel forces in Wexford, was buried in Mayglass Churchyard. Bagenal Harvey's grandfather, Rev. William Harvey, of Bargo Castle, was Rector of Mulrankin. Bargo Castle is about two miles south of Mayglass.

† A former Rector of Mulrankin, the Rev. William Hickey, who wrote under the name of "Martin Doyle," in the appendix to his "Notes and Gleanings relating to the County Wexford" (pp. 196-8) gives a list of castles in the county, with the names of their original owners.

Rolls." They formed part of that band of adventurers, partly Norman, partly Flemish, that came with Strongbow and FitzStephen from Pembrokehire and Glamorgan, ousted to a great extent the primitive inhabitants, and helped to create the peculiarities of the Baronies of Forth and Bargo in customs, dress, and even language, that have only recently disappeared. The late Mr. Herbert F. Hore, himself a descendant of one of these early settlers, quotes from an old Barony of Forth alliterative rhyme, giving the characteristics of some of these families* :—

Stiff Stafford
Dugged Lamport	=	Dogged Lambert.
Proud Deweros	=	Proud Devereux.
Lacheny Cheevers	=	Laughing Cheevers.
Currachy Hore	=	Obstinate Hore.
Shimereen Synnott	=	Showy Synnott.
Gentleman Browne	=	Gentle Browne.

Speaking of the Mulrankin family, he states that this Sir William le Brun "landed in Ireland in the Earl Marshal's train, and that the estate of Mulrankin appears in the Inquisitions of 1307 as being held of the Earl Marshal, and that Sir Nicholas le Brun, of Mulrankin, was High Sheriff in 1365." In the first year of Henry VI, 1420, Nicholas Brown, of "Molrankan," was appointed deputy of one of the King's officers in connexion with escheats.†

Sir Walter Browne, of Mulrankin, was Seneschal of the county in 1521 (Hore, Wexford, p. 146). A grandson of this Sir Walter Browne, Robert Browne, is referred to in a letter of Queen Elizabeth in 1572, as "a yonge gentleman of great valour, upon whom his father had valiantly builded a fortress, being also of near blood to our cousins, the Earls of Kildare and Ormond, traitorously murdered by . . . Kavanagh."‡ In Elizabeth's time the Brownes of Mulrankin also built a castle near Taghmon, near the Pill, called also "the Forest," and another near Enniscorthy, still known by their surname (Browneswood).

Patrick Browne, b. 1580, great-grandson of Sir Walter Browne above-named, succeeded his father in 1617 in the lands of Mulrankin, Browne's Castle, Arponestown (Harpoonstown), etc., and married Honoria Barry, daughter of David fitz James Barry, Viscount Buttevant;§ and his wife Honoria had the lands of

COUNTY WICKLOW.

The Seven Churches, Glendalough: Parish of Derrylossery.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘Except for the large Cathedral burial-ground, not one of the scattered “Seven Churches” is used by the peasantry for interring their dead. A single exception, however, is that of the Priory of St. Saviour, or “the Monastery,” as it is also called, where in 1765 a couple of highwaymen—two brothers—were buried after being hanged; their graves are at the east end of the Priory ground and on two small headstones the following inscriptions can be read’ :—

I.H.S.

Here lieth the Body | of Michael Mea- | gan died
April 26 | 1765 | aged 30 years.

I.H.S.

HERE LIETH THE | BODY OF JOSEPH | MEAGAN DIED APRIL |
26 1765 AGED 28 Y^{RS}.

‘The burial-ground round the Cathedral group of buildings is very extensive; by far the commonest name on the headstones is that of Byrne; others frequently met with are Toole, Doyle, and Cullen; the older stones are all to the south of the Cathedral; but a very strange and disappointing fact is that the oldest inscription, whether in Latin or in English, only dates from the year 1717.

‘Inside the Cathedral, in the chancel end, is an Irish-inscribed flag (noticed further on), and a large flat slab thus inscribed’ :—

Hic jacet in tumulo Corpus Domini Edmundi O'Meara de Cronybyrn
Qui Obdormivit in Domino Die Secu-unda Maij Anno Dom 1747 Ætatis sue 71.

HERE LIETH THE BODY OF
CATHERINE O'MEARA WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 25
OF SEPTEMBER 1757 AGED 28
Requiescant in Pace Amen

‘The next two inscriptions are copied from headstones inside the Cathedral, and appear to be the next in age’ :—

HERE LIETH THE | BODY OF LAURENCE | TOOLE DECEAS^D |
AUGUST THE 17TH | 1759 AGED 50 Y^{RS} | Lord have mercy on his | Soul Amen.

HERE LYETH | Y^E BODY OF | TOBES TOOL | DEC^R APRIL Y^E |
17TH 1767 AG^D | 57 Y^{RS}

‘In a small building known as “the Priests’ Church” (so called because several priests have been interred in it) there are three headstones and a flat slab; one of the headstones, that of Father Edward Rowan, is quite modern; he was curate of Glendalough, and P.P. of Blackditches, Co. Wicklow, for nineteen years, his death took place in 1893.

‘The inscription on the flat slab reads’ :—

HERE LYETH THE
BODY OF THE REVER^D PHELM
BRYAN DEC^P MA^r
13TH 1759 AGED
57 Y^s

‘A granite headstone, at the head of the above slab, bears an inscription in Latin, but, owing to weather-wear and the rough surface of the stone, the priest’s name is undecipherable, though it looks like “Caroll.” Of the inscription the first three lines alone can, with great difficulty, be distinguished as reading’ :—

I H S Hic iacet in tumulo corp^s Reverendi

‘The other headstone bears this inscription’ :—

HERE LIETH Y^E
BODY OF THE REUER^D IOHN
CONNOR DEC^P
OCTOB^R Y^E 11TH
1772 AG^D 83 Y^s
REQUIESCAT IN PACE

‘There is one other priest’s grave in the burial-ground ; it lies to the south-east of the Cathedral, and the headstone is thus inscribed’ :—

Hic iacet
Corpus Rev^{di} D.
D. Thomæ chol
monly qui obiit
Octavo Idus
Junii Anno 1759
Ætatis suæ ver^o
37.

'The oldest inscribed tombstone in English in the whole burial-ground stands to the south-west of the Cathedral; the inscription reads as follows':—

HERE LIETH YE
BODY OF DVDLEY
COSTOLO DECE ASED AVGVST YE
14TH 1717

'On a prostrate headstone, lying to the north of the "Priests' Church," can, with difficulty, be deciphered the following':—

This Stone is Erected here by | Simon Cullin in memory of his | Father Farrell Cullin dy^d Oct^r the 1 | 1751
Aged 49 years. Also his mo | ther Sara dec^d in the
62 y^r of her age | May they rest in peace Amen.

'The inscriptions which follow are copied from some of the less modern headstones south of the cathedral':—

HERE LIETH THE BODY | OF IOHN M^cCABE DE | CEASED IULY
THE 22ND | 1763 AGED 63 Y^{RS} LORD | HAVE MERCY ON HIS SOUL | AMEN.

HERE LIETH THE BODY OF MARY HARMAN DECEASED NOVEM-BER THE 16TH 1753 IN THE 52ND YEAR OF HER AGE.

HERE LIETH THE BODY OF MARY BYRNE WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE MARCH Y^E 14TH 1733 AGED 19 YEARS.

HERE LIETH THE BODY OF MILES BYRNE WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 2ND DAY OF MARCH 1745 AGED 49 YEARS

 aged 23 | Also his brother | Andrew Dep^d Febr^y | 22nd
 1765 Aged 13 | Also their Mother | Dep^d May 4th 1779.

[At the head of this inscription there is carved the crucifixion, with two soldiers, one with a spear, and the other with a halbert; they are in the military costume of the Georges—three-cornered hats, etc.]

‘On a flat slab beside the south wall of the Priests’ Church’ :—

 HERE ALSO LIETH THE BODY
 OF IOHN QVIN DECEAS^d FEB^y 5

‘Irish-inscribed slabs, a mediæval cross, and sculptured stones are now kept under lock and key in “St. Kevin’s Kitchen” (the little stone-roofed church, with a miniature Round Tower rising from its west gable).

‘St. Kevin’s Well (3rd June) lies to the south of the cathedral, on the opposite side of the river flowing from the upper Lough. The Pattern was suppressed by the clergy many years ago; the refreshment tents used to be pitched in the paddock, near Our Lady’s Church.

‘An Irish-inscribed slab (7 feet in length, and 3ft. 4 inches in width at the top, and 3ft. at the foot) lies near the north wall of the chancel of the cathedral. A much-defaced cross, with interlacing at the junction of the arms and at their ends, is carved on it. On either side of the shaft is an Irish inscription, each in a double line, the letters of which vary from 2½ to 3 inches in size. This slab is drawn on Plate xxxiv of the Second Volume of Petrie’s “Christian Inscriptions in the Irish Language,” but the letters there shown are much clearer than they now appear on the slab. Petrie deciphered the inscriptions as reading’ :—

NOTES.

The Moores of Tinraheen in the County Wexford.

The Rev. William Moore, M.A., was ordained priest by the Bishop of Ferns and Leighlin 25th March, 1682; Curate of Christ Church, Gorey, of Killisk and Ballycanew, 1682; Rector of Kiltannel, 1685; and Liskenfere, 1692; Prebendary of Clone, 1695; and died intestate before the 9th November, 1705. He may have been buried at Ballycanew.

He was twice married—Firstly, in 1682, to Elizabeth, d. of Major Roger West, and widow of . . . Masterson. She died on the 20 Oct., 1692.

His second wife was Alice, d. of Henry Martin, s. and h. of Anthony, Bishop of Meath. After the death of her 2nd husband she lived at Boley, in the County Wexford [she had been previously married to Thomas Whitfield, of Dublin, whose Will is dated 1689, and was proved in 1691]. Her Will was made in 1729, and proved in 1740.

By his second wife the Rev. William Moore had several children, including a son:—

William Moore of Tinraheen, Co. Wexford, who died in September, 1756, aged 57, and was buried at (?) Ballycanew. His wife was Frances, d. of Lorenzo Hodson, of Coolkenna House, Co. Wicklow. She died on the 12th December, 1781, aged 73, and was buried at Ballycanew.

Their children were:—

Lorenzo Moore, of Tinraheen, referred to further on.

Jane, d. 1831, aged 83. Buried at Ballycanew.

Alice, m. William, 3rd s. of Robert Clifford of Wexford.

Elizabeth, m. the Rt. Honble. George Ogle of Bellevue, Co. Wexford (ob. 10th Augt., 1814). She died 11th Augt., 1807.

Mary Anne, m. her first cousin, John Moore.

Lorenzo Moore of Tinraheen, and of Merrion Square, Dublin, was an officer in the 6th Carabineers; Colonel of the Battle Axe Guards; Ranger of the Curragh; M.P. for Dungannon in Grattan's Parliament, and for Ardfert in 1799. His Will is dated 1787, and was proved in 1804.

In 1774 he married Henrietta, d. of Sir Stephen Theodore Janssen, Bart., by whom he had a large family, one son being :—

The Rev. Calvert FitzGerald Moore, Chaplain-in-Ordinary to George IV, William IV, and Queen Victoria.

He was twice married—1st to Catherine (ob. 1825), d. of Major and Lady Catherine Marlay; and 2ndly to Julia, d. of Sir Benjamin Hobhouse, Bart.

The Rev. Calvert F. Moore died in 1868, aged 79.

He was the father of Miss Catherine G. Moore, who married Frederick, son of Sir James Bathurst.

‘The above information has been supplied by Miss Katharine Bathurst (10 Bloomfield Terrace, London, S.W.), who is anxious to obtain copies of the inscriptions on the Moore family tombstones in the Ballycanew Churchyard, Co. Wexford; and information on the parentage of the Rev. William Moore.’

‘This poem was written by Leonard M^cNally, k.c., of Roebuck, County Dublin, and refers to his wife—Frances T'Auson—a member of a French family. Mrs. M^cNally was born in 1766, and dying in 1795 was buried in the old churchyard of St. Mary's, Donnybrook, where her husband had the privilege of burial with the communion rails of the then church.

‘Any information as to the grave, or as to any parochial record in connexion with “the Lass of Richmond Hill,” of the Hill House, Richmond, in Yorkshire, would be gratefully received by her descendant, Mrs. Lyster-Jenings, Royal Terrace House, Kingstown, County Dublin.’

The Old Churchyards of Glenarm.

[From Mr. H. C. Lawlor.]

Heir lyethe the body of James Magill, who departed y^e—— of November, 1725.

I.H.S. Erected by Bernard Magill, of Owencloughy, in memory of his father and mother, Richard Magill, who departed this life the 1st day of January, 1797, aged 42 years. Also Ellen Magill, who departed this life the 25th of December, 1832, aged 72 years. Also the above-named Bernard Magill, who departed this life 17th October, 1843, aged 69 years.

‘It is interesting to note from the above dates that Bernard was born when his mother was only fourteen-years old.’

* For this Robert Walker's Family Bible Entries, see the Miscellanea.

‘An old stone, much defaced by time, stands near Sayers’ plot. The endeavour to decipher it cost me much time and trouble without much result. It is much chipped away at the edges. All I could make out of it is as follows’ :—

— WHO DEPARTED
THIS LIFE MARCH 1
1674 HERE ALSO LYES
THE BODY OF J—
—SELL A (?) HO DEP
ARTED THIS 26 DAY OF
DECEMBER 1679.

‘The space after J. would admit of the letters AMES, but this can only be conjectured, as the surface is chipped off. The SELL is comparatively distinct, but the letter following, though apparently A, is uncertain. It may be part of w, though very unlike it. If the letters are SELLA, the only name that would permit of this is Kinsella, a southern name, so far as I can ascertain quite unknown in this district at any time. The doubtful name may be JAMES RUSSELL, although this is a mere conjecture. The name Russell occurs twice in the Muster Roll of (circ.) 1630, Barony of Glenarm.’

Here lyeth the body of Thomas Sullivan, who departed this life April the 11th, 1777, aged 29 years. Also Bridget, his wife, and wife to John Walsh, who departed—

(Remainder broken off.)

Here lyeth the body of John McNeile, who died July the 30th, 1757, aged 53 years. Also Hector McNeile, his father, who died August the 26th, 1768, aged 96 years.

‘The name of McNeile has had long connexion with Glenarm, but I saw no other stone of this family in the Old Abbey Church-yard.’

‘The name of Duncan is recorded on the following stones’ :—

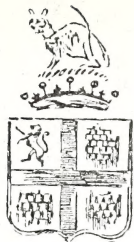

Here lyeth the body of Hugh Duncan, who departed the 27th day of February, 1720.

Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth Duncan, who departed this life the 5th of June, 1725.

Here lyeth the body of Thomas Duncan, who departed this life May y^e 31st, 1726, aged 38 years, and John Duncan, his son, who departed the 15 of April, 1740, aged 29 years.

‘The earliest armorial stone in the Glenarm Churchyards is that to the memory of Hugh M^cCollum, who died in 1710. Of the authenticity of this blazon there is at least grave doubt. Hugh M^cCollum established himself as a considerable landowner under the Earl of Antrim, but of his antecedents, pedigree, and his right to bear arms, nothing is now known. In the Muster Roll of (circa) 1630, the surname appears in several forms in the Barony of Dunluce as follows:—“John M^cCullane, possesses a sworde onely; John Callam, possesses no armes; Hugh M^cCullam, possesses no armes.” No M^cCollums appear in the Muster Roll as resident in the Baronies of Kilconway, Carey, or Glenarm, so that it seems a fair assumption that Hugh M^cCollum, of Linnalary, whose tombstone is inscribed with an armorial achievement, sprang from the yeomen or husbandmen M^cCollums, settled in the Barony of Dunluce about 1610, and that his “right to bear arms” was imaginary. It is worthy of note that it was about this period (1710) began throughout the north-east of Ireland (to which my personal experience is chiefly confined) the custom of inscribing the tombstones of many in humble walks of life with the armorial bearings belonging to some ancient family of similar surname, but in no way connected. This custom can be traced with reasonable probability to an old guild of stone-cutters who migrated from parish to parish cutting and erecting tombstones, armorial or otherwise, suited to the purses or the vanity of their customers. Where the name of the departed was not that borne by any armorial family, the stone-cutters often exercised great ingenuity in inventing armorial bearings to suit. It is rather grotesque that these old stones, the outcome of the imagination of the stone-cutters, are now often pointed to by descendants as proof not only of the gentility of their otherwise humble ancestors, but as actual evidence of their descent from noble or gentle armigerous families, without whose knowledge or consent the old stone-cutters had purloined coat armour to feed the vanity of their customers.

‘In the following two handsome and imposing upright stones it will be observed that not only his armorial achievement, but his Marquis’s coronet, have been borrowed from a Marquis of Clanrickarde.’

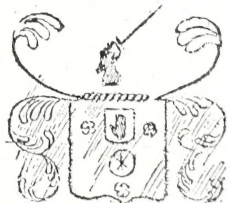

This monument was erected by Matthew Burke to the memory of his wife, Rose Burke, who departed this life the 23rd day of April, 1814, aged 56 years, who is here interred with eight of their children. Also Rachael, daughter of the above-named Matthew Burke, who died July the 12, 1861, aged 69 years.

‘The second stone has the same arms, omitting the coronet’ :—

Erected by William H. Burke in memory of his grandfather, Matthew Burke, who died 26th April, 1841, aged 96 years. Also his father, Captain W. H. Burke, late of H.M. R.C. Kite, who died at Kingstown 11 December, 1859, aged 72 years. A. R. Burke, eldest surviving son of the above-named Matthew Burke, obiit 10th November, 1866, aged 85 years. 3rd June, 1882, Anne, aged 50 years, wife of the above-named William Hamilton Burke, obiit 16th May, 1887, aetat 66 years.

Alexander Ritchie and Ulick Edmund, infant sons of W. H. Burke. Their mother obiit 1882, and their father obiit 1887.*

‘On the following stone it will be noted that a baronet’s badge has been included in the shield’ :—

HERE LYETH THE BODY OF HANS HAMILTON WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 15TH APRIL 1793 AGED 62 YEARS ALSO HIS WIFE MARGARET HAMILTON WHO DIED THE 1ST JANUARY 1816 AGED 71 YEARS ALSO 8 OF THEIR CHILDREN.

* There appears to be some confusion in the last six lines of this inscription: possibly a line has been accidentally omitted.

'Mr. Daniel Martin, of the Bay Farm, acted as receiver for the McNaughten family, who formerly possessed several townlands between Glenarm and Carnlough, originally one of the estates of the Donaldson family, who settled in the district at the 1610 Plantation. The Martin family is now extinct in Glenarm neighbourhood. The inscription on their tombstone reads as follows' :—

Sacred to the memory of Daniel Martin, late of Bay, who died 22nd March, 1792, aged 66 years. Also his son, James, who died 23rd August, 1829, aged 69 years. Here are interred Anne and Jane, children of the above James Martin, who died in infancy. Also his son, Daniel, who died 14th June, 1827, aged 30 years. And his daughter, Margaret, who died 12th June, 1841, aged 46 years. Here are interred Eliza, relict of the above James Martin, who died 23rd May, 1884, aged 76 years. Here also are interred the remains of William, eldest son of the above James Martin, who died 21st July, 1858, aged 64 years. Here also are interred the remains of Eliza Martin, daughter of the above-named James Martin, who departed this life 23rd June, 1872, aged 64 years. Here also are interred the remains of Hugh Martin, son of the above-named James Martin, who departed this life 15th January, 1873.

'The adjoining estate of Dromourne was granted by the fifth Earl of Antrim in 1737 to Roger Gribben. Of his family I have been unable to obtain any information beyond the following inscription on a stone in the churchyard' :—

Here lyeth the body of Barbara, wife of Roger Gribben, who departed this life 9th April, 1765, aged 54 years. Also Mr. Roger Gribben, departed this life 5 September, 1764, aged 64 years. Also the body of Patrick Sheridan, departed July, 1786, aged 63 years.

'The Dromourne property, like Harp Hall, consisting of several townlands, became divided into two portions: the north portion, containing Dromourne House, now the Rectory, was, like Harp Hall, added by purchase, in recent years, to the Londonderry estate of Garron Tower. The south portion, including Stonyhill, reverted to the estate of the Earls of Antrim.

'The division between the Harp Hall and the Dromourne estates is the lane leading up to the mountain passing the Roman Catholic Chapel of Carnlough. The Roman Catholic Church hold their ground on which their chapel and graveyard are situated under a lease, dated about 1812, from the Harp Hall estate.'

'The interment of a sojourner from a far country is recorded on a stone near the centre of the churchyard as follows':—

Here lyeth the body of James McInnish, son to John McInnish and Margaret McNeill, tacksman in the Parish of Killen in the Shire of Argyle, North Britain, who died in the year of our Lord 1777, aged 26 years. This stone was erected to his memory by his father.

Here lyes the remains of Agnes Bunton, who departed this life the 7 of January, 1840, aged 67 years.

'In various parts of the churchyard occur inscriptions recording the deaths of what I may describe as birds of passage in the history of Glenarm. So far as I can ascertain they are unknown, forgotten, and unrecorded elsewhere. Some of these are the following':—

Here lys the body of Margaret Stin (? Steen) who departed the 10th —, 1672.

Here lyeth the remains of Margaret Jaines, who departed this life the 5th of May, 1784, aged 45 years.

Here lyeth the bodies of 2 children of James Smartt, vizt., John and Mary, who died June y^e 15th, 1730.

Here lyeth the body of Patrick M'Skally, who departed this life December the 21st, 1775, aged 3 years. Also Ellanor, his sister, children to John M'Skally.

Here lyeth the body of William Harris, who departed this life Feb^{ry}., 1750, aged 53 years.

HERE LYETH THE BODY OF JOHN FINLAY WHO DIED 17 MAY 1723 & JEN MILER 8 MAY, 1728.

Here lyeth the body of James Mills, who died January the 28, 1747, aged 46 years.

Here are deposited the remains of Daniel Black, late of Glencloy, who departed this life on the 10th of April, 1790, aged 75 years.

HERE LYES THE BODY OF MARGERY PEARSON ALIAS MURPHY
WHO DYED 9 FEB^RY 1719.

Here lyeth the body of William Chisem, who departed this life Septem^r the 15th, 1740, aged 54 years.

‘A solitary representative of the name of Maxwell, so common in Dumfriesshire, is to be found on a stone near the centre of the churchyard, as follows’ :—

HERE LYETH THE CORPS OF JEAN
MAXWELL WHO DE
PARTED THIS LIFE
AUGUST THE 5TH
1755 AGED 20 YEARS.

‘As a rule the Scottish lowland names of the old Glenarm settlers were those most prevalent in the counties of Ayrshire, Lanark, and East Galloway or Wigton.’

‘The family of Shaw, of Ballygelly Castle, had their burial-place at Cairncastle, which is quite close to Ballygelly. As a rule, they had not much intercourse with Glenarm, but there is one stone in the Glenarm churchyard bearing this name, and neatly cut armorial bearings’ :—

Motto :—VINCIT QUI PARTITUR.

HERE LYETH THE BODY OF JOHN SHAW WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE
ON THE 6TH OF MAY
1813 AGED 76 YEARS.

'The family of Clerk or Clark was of some local note in the eighteenth century, if we may judge from several rather elaborate armorial stones erected to the memory of this family. The oldest Clark stone reads as follows :—

HERE LY
ETH THE BO
DY OF JENET
CLERK WHO DEPARTED T
HE 18 MARCH 17
07 AND JOHN
CLERK WHO D
EPARTED THE 17
JANUARY 1721.

'Two upright stones with handsomely carved armorial bearings record more recent interments of members of the family of Clark, as the name came to be spelled' :—

Motto :—AMAT VICTORIA CURAM.

Here lieth the body of William Clark who departed this life the 25th of April 1766 aged 59 years. Also the body of Jane Caldwell his wife who departed this life the 30th January, 1781 aged 59 years. Here are deposited the remains of William Clark late of Glenarm who departed this life the 18th of August, 1805 aged 58 years.

'Both these William Clarks, presumably father and son, were active members of the Presbyterian congregation of Glenarm, their names appearing as commissioners from the congregation to the meetings of the Presbytery on several occasions from 1750. A John Clarke acted in a similar capacity in 1793. The Clarks were connected by marriage with the family of Dunne, of whom we hope to treat in our next article.

'Contemporary with the family of Clark in Glenarm appears to have been that of Holmes. Two handsome stones remain to preserve the memory of the name, which seems to have quite died out, like that of Clarke, in the district. The inscriptions are as follows':—

Here lyeth the body of | Alexander Holmes, died |
June the 14th 1728 aged 75 years | and Fonal his wife died February | the 17th 1735 aged 73 years | also
Andrew Holmes Brother to | the above named Alexander who departed | this life the 31st of August 1782 aged |
82 years, and David Holmes | his son who departed
this | life the 17th day of September 1802 | aged 52
years. |

'This inscription is puzzling. Alexander Holmes must have been born in 1653, while his brother Andrew's birth took place in the year 1700. A difference of 47 years in the ages of brothers is, of course, impossible; it might possibly occur in the case of half-brothers, although this would be out of the common. The name of Andrew Holmes appears in the minutes of the Templepatrick congregation in connexion with a visitation of that congregation to Glenarm in the year 1772. He and William Clarke above-named each subscribed five guineas towards the liquidation of the arrears of stipend owing to the Rev. Mr. Read in that year, and David Holmes was one of the twenty bondsmen guaranteeing each 40 shillings a year towards the future upkeep of that minister's salary. These bondsmen did not fulfil their obligation. The second Holmes stone is inscribed as follows':—

Motto:—TRUE TO THE END.

Here lyeth the body of Hugh Holmes who dyed y^e
5th Oct. 1752 aged 58 years. Also his daughter Margaret, died Octr. y^e 5th 1745 aged 18 years.

'This stone is of slate, and excellently preserved. The two stones are close together, and it may be inferred that Hugh was son to the above-named Alexander, who would have been 41 years of age at the birth of Hugh. The family seems to have left Glenarm district at latest by the end of the eighteenth century. The impalement of his wife's reputed arms on the shield of Hugh Holmes, and a comparison of the impalement with the arms inscribed on the Clark stones, seems to indicate that Hugh Holmes married a Clark, although the fess chequy is equally suggestive of one of the Stewart family.

'A solitary stone records the name of Linghem in Glenarm. So far as I can trace, neither the Clarks, Holmes, nor Linghems held any land from the Antrim estate, being merchants or shopkeepers in the town. The armorial bearings as displayed on the tombstones must not be taken too seriously. The Linghem stone reads as follows:—

Motto:—NEC SINE ESSE FEROS.

Here lyeth the Body of James Linghem who died the 29th Day of May 1776 aged 78 years.

'To the family of Randel or M^cRandel are several old stones. This name appears to be quite extinct in the district. It seems suggestive of a bastard line of M^cDonnells. They are':—

Here lyeth the body of Hugh Randel, who departed the 28 of June, 1721.

Here lyeth the body of James Randles who died the 2nd day of July 1797 aged 72 years.

Here lyeth the body of James Randell who died y^e 21 Nov 1724.

Here lyeth the body of Hugh Randell who dyed the 17
Nov^{ber} 1729.

John Randell who dyed the 20 Septem. 1731.

Here lyeth the body of Mary, wife to James Randles
who departed this life—

Erected to the memory of Hugh M^cRandle, late of Duntague, who departed this life on the 2nd day of March 1805 aged 92 years.

‘In the Abbey Churchyard, so far as I can see, the Roman Catholics seem to have been buried only in the portion once occupied by the site of the old abbey, west and north of the modern church. In this portion lie the remains of a once much-beloved parish priest of the united parishes of Belfast, Derriaghy, the Drums, and Falls, the Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, P.P. He was a native of Glenarm, and came of a family held in high respect. It is now, I believe, extinct, and were it not for the act of a real good Samaritan, who recently had the family tombstone cleaned and done up, the stone would soon have become undecipherable. The inscription is as follows’ :—

Here lieth the body of Bernard O'Donnell, who departed this life 11th Feb. 1790, aged 48 years. Also the body of Roger O'Donnell, who departed this life 3 July, 1794, aged 87 years. Also the body of his spouse Eleanor O'Donnell alias Magill who departed this life 17th July 1785 aged 69 years. Also on the 1st Jan^y. 1814 the body of Rev. Hugh O'Donnell aged 75 y^s who was Parish Priest of Belfast during 44 years Closed is the hand that often gave relief and cold the heart that bled to each man's grief. And the body of Hugh O'Donnell jun^r died on the 14th July 1817 aged 18 years. Also his father Rodger O'Donnell who died the 16th March, 1820, aged 68 years. Rosella O'Donnell wife to Roger O'Donnell who departed this life 11th May 1848 aged 85 years.

'There are three stones dedicated to the memory of the family of M^cKillop, two in the Abbey churchyard, and one in the old churchyard of Tickmacrevan. They are as follows':—

Here lyeth the body of Neal M^cKillop who departed this life the 5th day of October, 1784 aged 61 years. At his left side lieth his wife aged 55 years, and at the right his mother.

Erected to the memory of James M^cKillop of Unchenaugh who departed this life the 15th of March 1826 aged 65 years.

'I have no evidence indicating the date of the arrival in the district of this Scottish family. The earliest mention of the name I have found is 1750, when John M^cKillup was a ruling elder of the Presbyterian congregation. The Rev. Classon Porter in a note states that John M^cKillup was an ancestor by the mother's side of Mr. Richard Davidson, formerly M.P. for Belfast. As the present representatives of the M^cKillops and Davisons are related, it seems as if this John M^cKillup was the direct ancestor of both, and father of David M^cKillop, R.N., who, on retiring from the navy, lived in Robert Montgomery's tenement in Altmore Street, which he bought, and which the family still derive rent from. David M^cKillop's tombstone in the upper churchyard reads':—

Underneath this stone are interred the remains of David M^cKillop, Esq^r. late of Glenarm who died on the 9th of July, 1805, aged 77 years. The greater period of his life was devoted to the service of his country in the navy, and having retired from that profession he became an active magistrate for the county of Antrim. He died as he had lived, respected.

'This gentleman left a perpetual annuity for the poor of Glenarm, which is still distributed by the rector of the parish. He was a member of the Established Church. His widow, who was a daughter of Mr. and the Lady Augusta Forbes, survived him twenty-three years. Their son, an officer in the Royal Navy, married, some years after his father's death, a Miss Dickey, of Ballygarvey, near Ballymena, a small property which came into that family through the Campbells. Captain M^cKillop bought the property from his wife's relatives, and some of his family still reside in Ballymena and Belfast.'

Here lyeth the body of Thomas Watt who departed this life the 11th of April 1769 aged 30 years. Also his son William, died the 4th of July 1769 aged 11 months.

Here lyeth the remains of Hugh Watt who departed this life the 12th day of July 1787 aged 55 years.

‘There are two large vaults within the abbey ruins, one with arched roof. Inside is a sandstone table-stone, inscribed’ :—

Sacred to the memory of Catherine Ann daughter of John Lanktree, Esq. who terminated a life of early and devoted piety on the 30th July 1847 aged 19 years. Also her sister Lavinia who died in infancy. Also her brother John W. C. who died 6th December 1849 at 11 years.

‘The other vault adjoining this one is simply inscribed’ :—

The Bruen Vault.

‘Mr. John Lanktree was agent for the Marchioness of Londonderry’s Carnlough estate. He was of a County Down family, and was succeeded in the agency by the father of the late Mr. Mark Wilson. Of the family of Bruen I have no information.’

‘The following are some inscriptions recording the interments of some of whom I have no other record’ :—

Here lyeth the body of Robert M^cCormick who died April y^e 21st 1742 aged 55 years.

Here lieth the body of Alexander Kile who dyed the 24th of August 1750 aged 63 years.

Here lyeth the remains of Mary M^cCool otherwise M^cCrae who departed this life the 28th of March 1811 aged 65 years.

Here lyeth the body of Daniel M^cCrae who departed this life 5th of October 1750, aged 30 years.

Here lyeth the body of Thomas the son of Bengamin Nickson. Died March the 4. 1759 aged 22 years.

Here lyeth the body of Daniel Devlin who departed the 5th of May 1753.

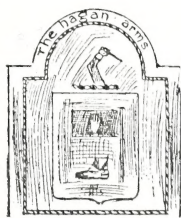

Here lyes the body of Nicholas Callins who dyed May y^e 25th 1712.

Here lyes the Body of Mary Atkinson who dyed the 6 June 1739.

Here lyeth y^e Body of Elizabeth Miller who died May y^e 20th 1742 aged 33 years.

Here lyeth the body of James Rutherford who departed this life May y^e 13 1721.

‘Built into the inside of a remaining bit of the old abbey ruin is a stone to the family of O’Hagan. It bears no date or other inscription than the words “The Hagan Arms.” The top part of this monument bearing these words is separated from the remainder, and lies in the vestry of the church. The O’Hagans were one of the old Irish families settled in this district prior to the Scottish settlement of 1620 onwards.

‘The widow of a member of the family of McNaughten, whose connexion, if any, with the North Antrim family, I cannot trace, lies buried in Glenarm. This is one of the few graves of Roman Catholics outside the site of the abbey':—

Motto:—HOPE IN GOD.

Here lyeth the body of Catherine M^cNaughten, wife to Daniel M^cNaughten who departed this life March the 14th 1784 aged 20 years, daughter to Neal M^cKenty of Crany.

I.H.S

Sacred to the memory of Bernard M^cKenty of Glenarm who died 20th July 1817 aged 60 years.

His daughter Mary M^cKenty, who died 4th September 1817 aged 4 years.

Also his daughter Charlotte M^cKenty who died 3rd Feb. 1843 aged 26 years.

And his son John M^cKenty surgeon who died at Bonny, Africa, on board the ship Lady Pagett 31st December 1841 aged 26 years Requiescat in Pace.

Likewise Bernard O'Neill, surgeon, of Glenarm; and nephew of the above named Bernard M^cKenty who died the 4th September 1834 aged 33 years.

'The name O'Neill, possibly connected with the above, occurs on a stone not far away from the last. It reads':—

Here lyeth the body of Margaret O'Neill who died the 9th day of Dec^r 1783 aged 53 years.

Also Henry O'Neill her husband aged 83.

Their son John O'Neill died 4th Nr. 1832 aged 63.

'To the name Robinson are six stones in the Abbey Churchyard. A family of this name has occupied a farm at a place called Fox Hall, about four miles from Glenarm, on the Larne Road, for the past 150 years or probably more. I cannot say if all the stones are commemorative of members of the same connexion. They read as follows':—

Here lyeth the body of Catherine Robinson who departed this life Feb^y 9th 1732 aged 40 years.

Here lyeth the body of Gawn Robinson who died Oct^r. 20th 1753 aged 67 years. Also James Robinson late of Fox Hall son to Gawn Robinson who departed this life April the 30th 1801 aged 64 years.

Erected by James Robinson of Fox Hall in memory of his mother Margaret Robinson who departed this life 31 July 1837 aged 70 years, also his father Joseph Robinson who departed this life 31st December 1841 aged 85 years. Also Mary Robinson wife to Andrew Robinson who departed this life 8 March 1845 aged 42 years.

Motto:—VIRTUTUS GLORIUS MERCIS.. (? VIRTUTIS GLORIA MERCES.)

Erected to the memory of William Robinson of Glenarm who departed this life the 1st May 1800 aged 81 years. Also his wife Elizabeth Robinson who departed this life the 12th of July 1791, aged 72 years.

'The above armorial engraving is at first a little puzzling, as it does not represent the arms of any family of Robinson in that fountain of the Glenarm stone-cutter's information, the peerage of the time. It really belongs to a Scottish family of Robertson, a very different clan from Robinson; but probably as the stone-cutter could not find a real Robinson coat, he got the nearest thing that he could.'

Here lyeth the remains of Marg^t. Robinson who departed this life the 2nd of February 1816 aet. 13 years, likewise of her brother Daniel Robinson who departed this life 17th January 1821 aet. 12 years, also their father and mother Alexander Robinson who departed this life November 18th 1836 aged 80 years also his wife Jane who departed this life October 31st 1856 aged 87 years.

‘In the upper churchyard is a stone inscribed’ :—

Here lyeth the remains of Hugh Coningham who departed this life 22nd of April 1798 aged 71 years.

‘This is one of only two or three stones in the upper churchyard of date prior to 1800. Of Hugh Coningham I have no other record, except that he was a witness to Nicholas Stewart’s Will in 1773.’

Soldierstown Churchyard.

of our Lord 1816, aged 48 years.

Here lyeth y^e body of Alice Leigh, wife to Ralph Leigh, who departed y^s life, y^e 22nd of Feb^y, 1729, aged 52
years.

Tullyrusk Graveyard.

[From Mr. W. F. Reynolds.]

‘This small graveyard lies about eight miles from Belfast, and, perhaps, four miles north-west from Dunmurry, at the back of Collin Mountain. It is surrounded by fields, the approach to it being through a farm-yard. The gravestones are almost all upright and in fair condition, but, owing to the exposed position of the place, are much blackened, and difficulty is experienced in reading their inscriptions. Many graves have no stones.

Here lyeth the body of Alexander Witherup who departed this life February 16th, 1780, aged 60 years.

Elizabeth Waters departed this life January the 15th,
1720, aged 63 years.

Erected by Letitia Kennedy in memory of her father, James Matchet, who departed this life Decem^r 13th, 1816 aged 72 years. Also her mother, Elizabeth Matchet, who departed this life Novm^r 30, 1825, aged 71 years.

Here lieth y^e body of Thomas Havron who died, on the 10th of November 1800, aged 63 years. Also his daughter, Mary Havron, who died, on the 14th of Agu^t 1801, aged 38 years.

Sacred to the memory of William Magee, late of Belfast, who departed this life. the 29th of November, 1823, aged 65 years.

This stone is erected as a small tribute of respect to one of the best of Husbands by his afflicted widow.

COUNTY CARLOW.

Clonmore Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘Clonmore, so interesting for its ancient remains, lies between Tullow and Hacketstown, eight miles to the north-east of the former. To distinguish it from other Clonmores (“the big meadow”) it was known in ancient times as Clonmore-Mogue, after its patron saint—St. Mogue, venerated on the 11th of April.

‘Within a distance of half a mile, in an east-to-west direction, the following objects of archæological interest are to be met with’ :—

1. A Pagan sepulchral Moat.
2. The old churchyard, and shaft and head of a High Cross.
3. “St. Mogue’s Cross,” ringed but not perforated, and undivided into panels.
4. St. Mogue’s Well, now neglected.
5. A triple bullaun stone.
6. The extensive ruins of a castle.

‘The churchyard contains no ruins of the old church. About the middle of the ground stands the broken shaft of a cross, 6 feet 2 inches high, inserted in a square base; the sides of the shaft measure 18 and 12 inches; a perch to the south of it, half sunk in the ground, lies its ringed head, sculptured, but not perforated. Several granite slabs and boulders, which stand or lie recumbent among the graves, bear in relief either a ringed or a plain cross.

‘In the south-east corner of the churchyard, near a large sycamore tree, there is a granite slab set up on its side sunk in the ground, measuring 4 feet in length, and averaging 7 inches in thickness; in the middle of it is an oblong hole, 9 inches by 6 inches, which appears to have been intended as a socket for the dowel of a cross.

‘The inscribed sepulchral monuments are not of an old date, nor are they of much interest.

‘The earliest dated stones now visible bear the following inscriptions’ :—

‘On a headstone at the west side of the burial-ground’ :—

I.H.S.

Here lieth y^e Body of y^e Rev^d.
Patrick Roffeter who died 9th
Aug^t 1771 Aged 52 years.
May he rest in peace Amen.

‘Alongside the above’ :—

I.H.S.

Here lieth the Body of the Reverend Nicholas Doogan who departed
this life y^e 28th of Jan^y 1767 Aged 40 y^{rs}. May he rest in peace AMEN.

‘A headstone’ :—

[Remainder under ground.]

‘Headstone at the south-east end’ :—

Here lieth the Body | of Patrick Murphy | Deceased
August y^e | 7th 1778 (?) Aged 67 y^{rs} | Lord have mercy on | his soul. |

‘A badly fractured slab lying at the west end of the church-yard bears a coat-of-arms in relief at the top, viz.’ :—

A chevron between two stars and a . . . (?) above it, and three hands below it. In chief three lions rampant.

'This coat-of-arms resembles nothing given in Burke's "General Armoury" either under Byrne or O'Byrne.

'The inscription reads':—

This Stone was erected by Mr Charles
Byrne of Sleat[y in the] Queen's County
May 1745. H[ere lieth] the Body of Mr.
Charles By[rne of . . .] in the Queen's County who depar[ted this life] the 21st of July 1768
..... Mr. Edmond Byrne
..... tomb.

'Ryan in his History of the County Carlow (at p. 336) states that the following inscription is to be found on a tombstone in this churchyard':—

HERE : LYETH : THE : BODY : OF : MR. : EDMOND : M^cHUGH :
GAUKAUNGH* : BYEN : AND : HIS : THREE : CHILDREN :
MORTAGH : IOHN : AND : ANN : HE : WAS : Y^e : GREAT :
GREAT : GRANDSON : OF : PHELM : BUOY : —UG : DECEASED :
OCT^r : THE : 20 : 1737 : AGED : — —

'A very careful search for this tombstone failed to discover it.'

'On the north side of the little Protestant Church, divided from the burial-ground by the public road, deep sunk in the ground, lies an undressed boulder-font, with a large rectangular bowl, now the receptacle for rain-water and miscellaneous rubbish. An almost identically similar boulder-font, both in shape and size, lies near the high unsculptured cross in the churchyard at Aghowle, a few miles off, in the County Wicklow. There are a few modern graves in the enclosure round this church.

Tullow, the Augustinian Abbey Burial-ground.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This burial-ground lies on the south side of the town, and close to the River Slaney. There exists no trace of the Abbey buildings, the date of the foundation of which is also unknown.

'The only objects of antiquity are a socketed granite boulder and a ringed cross-head.

'The granite boulder is a large one, lying sunk in the ground

* i.e. of the snub nose.

near the entrance gate ; it has a socket in it, is $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches square, and 8 inches in depth. It probably was used to stand a cross in.

' A large cross-head is now built upright on the top of an arched recess, covering a well, in the east wall of the burial-ground ; though ringed, it is not perforated ; and though the front and back re plain, there are traces of Celtic patterns at the sides. According to tradition this cross-head was brought from an adjoining field on the townland of Templeowen (i.e., St. John's Church).

' The following inscriptions are copied from some of the earlier tombstones, none of which date earlier than the eighteenth century.

' A box-tomb ' :—

Here Lieth the Body of the Rev^d | Tho^s Byrne who departed this life | September the 7th 1746 aged 70

‘Translation of Robert Clements’ epitaph in Drung Church’ :—

Sacred to the Memory of Robert Clements Esq. Guardian & Teller of our State Treasury ; an excellent Son, Husband, Father, Friend and Citizen ; who by Act, by Speech, by Sword, by Faith, by Authority, at Home, Abroad, in Senate, in Every Place vindicated the Liberty of his Country. His Habits being formed after those of Primitive Simplicity, he was, both in his Life and in his Death, an Honour to his Religion. Among endless opportunities of increasing his fortune, he selected only those which were absolutely blameless, (affording) an example rather of despising wealth, than of desiring to hand down great riches to his descendants. He managed the Finances of the Country and the Affairs of his Friends with such Integrity that no Suspicion of Dishonesty in them, or of Fraud or Avarice could fall upon his name. To injure no man, and to do good to the utmost of his power he esteemed his greatest gain. In settling disputes he was a frequent and most felicitous Arbiter, as well as in adjudicating upon them a most righteous Judge, in that, disregarding the persons of the litigants, he looked only at the Cause itself with a penetrating discernment. He preferred to be, rather than to appear, good ; to be charitable without ostentation, and to give praise to others rather than to court it for himself. Each of these qualities singly often adorns other men, but in him they were happily united : Sobriety mingled with Good-fellowship, Justice tempered by Mercy, Firmness accompanied by Discretion, and Courage with Modesty ; These Virtues being planted in a kindly nature, Practice watered and Religion gave their increase. This most excellent of Men departed from this Mortal Life amongst mourning Friends, and full of hope of Immortality on the 29th day of December in the year 1722, in the 59th year of his age. Theophilus his eldest Son placed (this tablet to his memory). Reader ! Reflect what Posterity may say of you.

COUNTY CLARE.

Kiltenanlea Church.

[From Mr. T. J. Westropp.]

‘A picturesque fifteenth-century ruin near the rapids of the Shannon. It has a neatly moulded pointed door to the south, with a double-oped holy water stoup in the east jamb. Near the southeast angle, which is on the point of collapse, is a trefoil-headed lancet; the east light is tall, chambered, and ogee-headed, the splay being lintelled. There is a remarkable rock-basin and a holy hawthorn, covered with rags and other offerings. The Holy Well of St. Senan Liath, the patron, brother, it is said, of the more famous saint of Iniscatha (Scattery Island), lies outside the graveyard to the north.'

Churchtown (North) Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

'There are at least three places called Churchtown in the County Cork, one in the extreme north of the county, and two in the south-eastern portion of it, known as Churchtowns North and South. Churchtown (North) graveyard is picturesquely placed on a height about two miles east of Middleton, on the highway to Youghal. It is well named so far as the church is concerned, which is one of the best preserved of the old pre-Reformation churches in the county, the four walls being intact—the eastern two-light lancet-window, and even the piscina, near which on the south side is a single lancet-window. Considering how close it lies to the high road, it is astonishing to find it so little dilapidated; but the fact of there being really no town, but only half a dozen houses near it, may explain its escape so far from wanton vandalism. Rather unusual, too, there are not many graves, and but one headstone within the old church walls. The latter is still very legibly inscribed':—

This | stone was | erected by | Catheri | ne Barry in memory of her husband Bar | tholomew Barry who died 29th Y^e Vth, | 1775 aged 60 years.

'The following are selections from about fifty headstones here, besides two table-tombs.

'Table-tomb':—

Ballyvane | who at the advanced age of 78 | years
[illegible] the 11th of May | Also to the memory of where there is an old castle of the name in tolerably good preservation, the top part being still accessible by a flight of stone stairs.’

Churchtown South Churchyard.

[From James Coleman.]

‘Formerly known as Ballintemple, and anciently called Bally-gourny, this churchyard lies to the south-west of the little village of Churchtown South, near the head of Ballylanders Bay, and about three miles south-east of Ballycotton. Small and overcrowded-looking, this graveyard is decently kept, and, in its centre, are the walls of the ancient church, still perfect, with the exception of the upper part of the eastern gable, which is gone. The stonework of the windows in the two gables, and of the one window in the north wall, and of the doorway in the south wall, has disappeared; but there is still a tiny lancet-window nearly perfect in the south wall near where the altar stood. The interior, which is a simple oblong, about 40 feet long by 16 feet wide, is filled up with graves. Of the relatively numerous inscriptions here the following are some of the oldest’:—

Here lies the body of James Walsh who Died | in the Schull Churchyard.

[From Mr. T. J. Westropp.]

'The ancient parish church of Schull lies to the west of the harbour, on a rising ground, with a beautiful view of the little town, and "Gabriel's rough defiles," beyond it. It consists of a nave and chancel, mainly built in 1720, and a porch, over which is a round-headed tablet, with the hardly legible date 1796. The windows, doors, and chancel arch are plain and flattish, round-headed. There seem to have been a gallery and belfry at the west gable. In the north wall of the chancel we find the only traces of an older building, a neat-chamfered window (fifteenth century) with an ogee head, and a pier with long and short masonry. The tombs, as usual, are neither remarkable nor old. I give some of the older inscriptions (near the south-west angle).

'A table-tomb; the arms were on a separate slab, and are gone':—

Major William Hull dyed | March the 29 1729 Aged
49 | years Herbert Tom Hull dyed | May 29. 1744 Aged Donnybrook Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘Many inscriptions from this now closed burial-ground, copied by the Rev. R. S. Maffett, have already appeared in the Second and Third Volumes of THE JOURNAL; these which follow have not yet appeared.

‘On a small headstone at the top of which are a skull and cross-bones; owing to the flaking nature of the stone, several words have disappeared’ :—

[Here Ly] eth y^e Body of [Pa] trick Deuero [x or s ?]
Late [of] Rings end who Dep^d | this Life y^e 25th day of [] 1730, & in y^e 64th | year of his Age | .

Here Lie the Remains of M^{rs}
Ruth Steell. She Died Febr^y 2nd
1741. And in the 79th Year of her Age.

‘On a flat slab’ :—

Here lies the Body of | SARAH KEATING | Daughter of Maurice Keating | Esq^r of Narramore who | departed this life on the 13th of | March A.D. 1789 in the 63rd year | of her age | etc.

‘Then follow ten more lines descriptive of her virtues.’

'About the middle of the burial-ground there stands an obelisk of white sandstone, on the four sides of the base of which were cut inscriptions. On three sides the inscriptions are quite weather-worn away, not a letter being now traceable; on the fourth side (facing the street) the following inscription is just legible':—

Near this place
Are deposited the remains of the Right Hon^{ble} James Tynte & Rob^t. Tyn(te) Esquires Grandfather and Father of Sir James Stratford Tynte.
Also the remains of James Tynte, Esq^r (his son)
And Martha his Daughter.

'In connexion with this obelisk Mr. J. Coleman, M.R.S.A.I., has supplied the following additional information:—

'A monumental stone in the shape of an obelisk is placed over the grave in the old Churchyard of Donnybrook near Dublin, of Sir James Stratford Tynte, Baronet, but from the effects of the weather very little of it is now legible. It is given as follows in "Notes and Queries" for October 21st, 1865, pp. 333-4':—

The Body of Sir James Stratford Tynte, General of the Army of Volunteers of Ireland who died the 10th of November, 1785, was here interred with military honours.

Near this place are deposited the remains of the Right Honourable James Tynte [of Dunlaven in the County of Wicklow, buried 12th April, 1758] and Robt. Tynte [buried 25th June, 1760]. Esquires, grandfather and father of Sir James Stratford Tynte. Also the remains of James, his son, and Martha, his daughter.

Whilst the patriotism of a Volunteer and the social virtue of a tender husband, dutiful child, fond parent, and loyal subject are thought estimable, the memory of Sir James Tynte will be revered.

This last sad token O my love, receive!
Alas 'tis all your Hannah now can give!

'In one of the Visitation returns from Donnybrook in the Consistorial Court, Dublin, Sir James Tynte's burial is recorded in the following terms:—"Buried at Donnybrook, Sir Ja^s. Tent, 13th Nov^r. 1785."

'Hannah (Saunders) was the widow of Sir James S. Tynte, Bart.'

Dublin, Poolbeg Street, German Lutheran Church.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

'In "Notes and Queries" (London), November 17th, 1866, page 398, appeared a Note, that in Poolbeg Street is a building which was a place of worship, for a long time past unused. On the entrance was a tablet with this inscription:—"The German Lutheran Church, built 1678, repaired 1806." In the interior, which is in a sadly dilapidated state, is a small-sized monument with the inscription':—

Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Elizth Jane Williams, who departed this life the 27th Febr^y 1827, aged 75 years. This small tribute of the tenderest affection is erected by her afflicted and mourning daughters, Elizath and Maria Williams. Also her above named daughter Maria, the beloved wife of Thomas Medlecote, who departed this life the 26th of Sep. 1841, aged 49 Years.

'In a vault under the floor of the building the remains of the above-named and others have been deposited. A note in "Notes and Queries," December 15th, 1866, stated that this building was used by the Independents in 1825, and for several years past.'

Dublin, St. George's Church Tower in Hill Street.

[From Mr. Thos. U. Sadleir.]

'In the tower of the old Church in Hill Street, which is all that remains standing of the former Church.'

'On marble tablet':—

Werber (sic) Street Woollen Draper in the City of Dublin who departed this life the 28th of December 1786 in the 47th year of his age.

‘Flat tombstone, at foot of Rawlings stone.’

Sacred
To the memory of
GEORGE PACK ESQ. of Kilkenny and of Lower Mount Street Dublin
who departed this Life
July A.D. 1824
Aged 45 years.

THE BELLS OF ST. WERBURGH'S.

'Notes from "The Church of St. Werburgh's, Dublin," by Rev. S. C. Hughes, M.A., LL.D., 1889.

'In 1728 James Southwell left a bequest of £431 for a clock and peal of bells, on condition that the tower should be finished within three years of his death. The tower was completed in 1732.

"The new sett of six Bells," greatly appreciated for their sweetness and harmony, were placed in position in 1748.

'There was doubt about the security of the spire, which had been added after 1766. "The stones of which it and the tower were constructed were somewhat small; it was said to be resting on decaying wood. There was a panic caused by the fall of a tower at Liverpool: it overlooked the Castle Yard; it was doomed." In 1810 the spire was taken down, in 1836 the tower was demolished; in 1855 the bells were sold, all but one, which was kept for ordinary purposes at St. Werburgh's. One of the peal, which was somewhat injured, was sold to Mr. Hodges, Abbey Street. The others were dispersed, one to St. Mary's, one to Castleknock, one to Clonsilla, and one to St. Mary's Chapel of Ease (commonly called the Black Church).'

Dublin. St. Werburgh's Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'Many of the slabs (particularly those lying flat) in this churchyard are either now illegible or extremely hard to decipher; there is not one with an inscription in raised letters; and the earliest legible one that I could discover was dated 1701. It stands against the southern end of the east wall of the churchyard, and is much damaged at the upper right hand side; the inscription reads':—

THIS STONE AND [BVRI]
AL PLACE BELONG[ETH]
TO CHRISTOPHER [RICE] AND HIS WIFE ELIN[OR] RICE ALIAS TOOLE AND THEIR POSTERITY HERE
LIETH 6 OF THEIR ~ CHILDREN 1701.
HERE ALSO LIETH THE BODY OF Y^R S^D CHR. RICE WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE Y^R 14TH of APRIL 1721

‘Near the Rice headstone is a large, flat slab with a coat-of-arms at the top, and below it the following inscription, which is all but illegible’ :—

Here lieth the Body of the Reverend John Blachford, D.D. Chancellor of St Patricks Dublin and Minister of this Parish who died the 24th (?) Day of October 17 [48] Aged ———
As likewise the Body of his Youngest son the Reverend John Blanchford (sic) Vicar of Lusk who departed this life July 5 1764
Aged ———

And also of his eldest son the Reverend
Will^m Blachford, And Keeper of March (sic) Library
Died of a fever May . . . Aged 43.
Most amiable happy & tenderly beloved
All this Joy availeth him Nothing.
I heard a Voice from heaven saying, Write,
Blessed are the Dead in the Lord. Rev. 14 v. 13
. . . the fatherless Children I will preserve
Them alive, & let thy Widows trust in me . . .
God shall wipe away all tears from their Eyes, there shall be no more Death Neither Sorrow nor crying. Rev. 21 v. 4. Amen.

‘The “March Library” is intended for Primate “Marsh’s Library.”

‘The coat-of-arms and crest at the head of the slab are cut in relief, and consist of three bars; the crest probably a demi-swan. Burke’s General Armory gives the Blachford arms as :—“Barry wavy of six or and gules, on a chief three pheons.”

‘Rev. S. C. Hughes, LL.D., Rector of St. Werburgh’s, in his book on the history of this church, states that the first-named Rev. John Blachford obtained a scholarship in Dublin in 1705, and graduated in 1707; in 1718 he became Prebendary of Donaghmore, and in 1724 Prebendary of Wicklow. He was Chancellor of St. Patrick’s from 1744 to 1748, in which latter year he died from the result of breaking his leg in Grafton Street, Dublin; and he was buried on the 27th of October in St. Werburgh’s churchyard. It is strange that the name on the slab is in two cases spelt “Blachford,” and in the third instance “Blanchford”; the former appears to be correct.’

‘In the eastern portion of the burial-ground is a square headstone on which is lightly cut the following inscription’ :—

Major Sirr and Humphry Minchin
1790

‘This Major Sirr was the capturer of Lord Edward FitzGerald shortly before the outbreak of the Rebellion of 1798; Humphry Minchin was his son-in-law.’

‘A flat slab, lying in the middle of the burial-ground, bears an inscription, the first half of which is very faint, as far as it is decipherable; it reads’ :—

Here lyeth the Bodies of In O'Hara, Ann his wife, & ten of their Children. Ia^s Smith Esq^r in Dor. & three of their children. Also the S^d Dor. who dyed 6th Aug^t 1774. Aged ——— .

Here lyeth also the Body of Elizth
Daughter of the said Ia^s and Dorothea
Smith, and widow of Ia^s Smith, Esq^r
She died 28th February 1829 Aged 88.

Dunsoghly. The Plunkett Mortuary Chapel (Parish of St. Margaret's).

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘D'Alton in his History of the County Dublin (p. 385) states that:—Adjoining the Plunkett Castle of Dunsoghly is a small edifice with an old, pointed, arched doorway, over which a curious slab is inserted, on which are carved in relief the instruments of our Lord's Passion, while, on the sill of the framework containing the mural slab, is cut in incised lettering :—

J. P. M: D. G. S. 1575

‘These initials stand for :—Johannes Plunkett, Miles: Domina Geneta Sarsfield.

‘Sir John Plunkett, Kt., of Dunsoghly, was descended from a younger son of Christopher, 1st Baron of Killeen. He was born in 1504, bred to the law, and in 1559 appointed Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, and continued in that office till 1563. His death took place in 1582. His third wife, who survived him, was Genet, daughter of John Sarsfield, of Sarsfieldstown, County Meath, and sister of Sir William Sarsfield, K^t., of Lucan, Mayor of Dublin in 1566.

'Genet Sarsfield is stated to have had no less than six husbands; they were:—

1. Robert Shillenford, Alderman of Dublin.
2. James, son of Sir Thomas Luttrell of Luttrellstown, Co. Dublin, who died in 1557.
3. Robert Plunkett, 5th Baron of Dunsany; died in 1559.
4. Sir Thomas Cusack, K^t., of Lismullen, Co. Meath; died 1574.
5. Sir John Plunkett, K^t., of Dunsoghly; died 1582.
6. Sir John Bellew, K^t., of Bellewstown, Co. Meath; died 1600.

'She died on the 23rd February, 1597, and was buried at Moorechurch, Co. Meath.

'D'Alton in the History mentioned above, on page 388, states that there is a second mural slab (which I believe is at present hid under ivy) bearing the following inscription:—

IOHANNES PLUNKETT DE DVNSOGLIA MILES, CAPITALIS QVONDAM IVSTICIARIVS REGII (? REGINÆ) IN HIBERNIA BANGI, HOC STRVXIT SACELLAM.

'i.e.—Sir John Plunkett, K^t., of Dunsoghly, formerly Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench in Ireland, built this chapel.

'For another Plunkett slab here, dated 1675, see the JOURNAL, vol. iv, p. 50.'

COUNTY FERMANAGH.

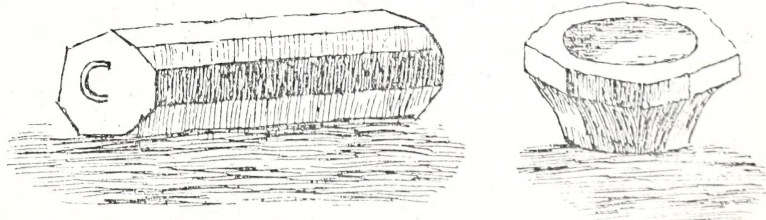

Derryvullan Old Churchyard.

[From Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

'The old churchyard of this parish, in which, until 1854, stood the parish church, is situated in the townland of Derryvullan (i.e. Maelan's oak-wood) on a hilly promontory overlooking Tamlaght Bay, on the eastern shore of Upper Lough Erne. This place seems to be first mentioned in the following sentence in the Martyrology of Tallaght, written about the eighth century A.D.:—"Diochuill MacMaelduibh in Areach Muilte oe Locuibh Eirne." The church is mentioned by the Four Masters as that of Aireach Maolain,* and in the Annals of Ulster as Aire-Maelain eaglais Tigernach. The name became latinized as Ecclesia Derrydmelan, by which name this church is mentioned in the Ecclesiastical Taxation of the Diocese of Clogher, A.D. 1302-7. The church was dedicated to St. Tighernach (28th February). The parish was formerly very large. Before the Reformation it included that of Magheracross, where there was a chapel of ease, and portions of the parishes of Kilskeery and Dromore, County Tyrone. The names of a number of the pre-Reformation clergy are known from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century. They include Arthur MacCawell, who became Bishop of Clogher in 1389, and John Maguire, during whose pastorate Derryvullan Church was desecrated by the shedding of blood in 1484. From 1610 to 1870 the living was in the gift of Trinity College, Dublin. After the Reformation the parish ceased to be a distinct benefice in the Roman Catholic Church. From that date until the nineteenth century the parish was in six detached portions, the largest of which was in the north of County Fermanagh, and *O'Donovan in the Annals of the Four Masters (vol. iv, p. 923 note) remarks that it is curious how the place-name "Aireach" is anglicized "Derry" in the County Fermanagh.

included Irvinestown, where, ever since the seventeenth century, there have been a chapel of ease and burial-ground. The new church and churchyard here became, after Disestablishment, the parish church, etc., of Derryvullan North. The parish church stood in the second largest portion of the parish; it was ruinous in 1623, but it was in repair in 1679. In 1854 it was ordered to be pulled down, a new church and churchyard having been consecrated in the adjoining townland of Mulrod. The old rectory was at Tullyclea, in the Irvinestown part of the parish. During the nineteenth century some re-arrangement of parochial boundaries and formation of new parishes took place, so that the modern ecclesiastical parish is a compact one, formed out of portions of the old parishes of Derryvullan, Derrybrusk, Enniskillen, and Cleenish. The interior width of the old church was 27 feet; the east wall and part of the north wall are still standing. There was a large east window, but no windows in the north wall. The churchyard is in the custody of the Enniskillen Rural District Council, and is still used for burials by families of all denominations. It is surrounded by a very good wall, and contains a good many Irish yews, lilacs, and laburnums, as well as a great number of tombstones, on over 120 of which the inscriptions are still (1914) more or less decipherable. The inscriptions on all those prior to 1803 are given below; they are of some interest, as the earliest extant Parish Register only begins at that date. The previous Parish Register of Derryvullan is said to have been cut up into tailors' measuring strips by the clerk or sexton, who followed that trade. About 100 yards south-east of the churchyard is situated St. Patrick's Well. It is very small, and there is a tradition that St. Patrick baptized converts here after preaching at Tamlaght, an adjoining townland. The only relics of the old church are the Communion Plate, which is still in use, and which was presented by James King, of Gola, in the neighbouring Parish of Derrybrusk, in 1727, and an old octagonal font with an octagonal stem, which is now preserved in the new church. Its age is unknown, but it seems to be of fifteenth-century design. The basin is only 2 inches deep, with no hole to carry off the water. Underneath the basin there is a socket, and attached to the stem is an iron ring. The font can now only be made to stand by fitting one into the other, but the ring may originally have been bolted into the floor or a base. The dimensions are:—Diameter of font, upper, 15 inches; lower, $7\frac{3}{4}$ to 8 inches; diameter of basin, $10\frac{1}{2}$ inches; diameter of stem, $7\frac{1}{2}$ or $7\frac{3}{4}$ to 8 inches; length of stem, 21 inches; depth of basin, 2 inches. Total height of font and stem together, 27 inches.

CHURCHYARD.

[From a rubbing by Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

‘There is a stone which was built into the north wall of the ruined church about forty years ago. It is of a slightly arched shape, as shown in sketch, and has the figures 639 on one corner. They may have formed part of the date 1639, but if so the figure 1

Scale to the original size must have been on a separate stone. It is said that this stone was formerly over the churchyard entrance, but from the appearance of the latter it would seem more likely to have been over the church door. The stone's greatest length is 41 inches, and width $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches. It is possible the church may have been restored or rebuilt in 1639.

‘In the western ditch of the churchyard.’

‘No. 1. Headstone:—

‘On this stone is carved the coat-of-arms used by some branches of the Crawford family, viz.:—“A fesse ermine between three mullets.” The crest is so defaced that it is impossible to be certain what it is meant to be, but it may have been an arm embowed, the hand grasping something. Below the arms is the motto “Sine Labe Nota.” It may be the monument which Lawrence Crawford, of Carrowmacmea, County Fermanagh, who died in 1731, directed his son John to erect to his memory, within a year of his decease, at the cost of £5; but Laurence's sons, William, of Snowhill, County Fermanagh, and James, of Enniskillen, used a fesse ermine between three fleurs-de-lis as a coat-of-arms on their seals. Laurence Crawford was buried in this churchyard, presumably in the family vault, or on the site of it if the vault was not yet built (see No. 47), but it is most unlikely that he was buried in the ditch. In any case this stone is probably not in its original position, and if there is any inscription on it, it must be interred. The Crawfords held lands from the Corrys of Castle Coole. Laurence Crawford's mother was Anne, sister to John Corry, of Castle Coole, who died circa 1683, and his daughter, Margaret, married James Corry, of Carrowmacnea.

sinister side cross-bones. The arms (as far as they can be seen) are a sword and lance, or two swords crossed saltirewise, in chief three (or one) fleurs-de-lis, and on the dexter side three annulets. The rest of the shield is hidden. The crest is a man's hand holding a spear. The arms and crest are somewhat similar to those borne by certain branches of the Montgomery family, but it is unknown to which branch the owners of this vault belonged. Carry (not Carvy) is a townland in Inishmore Island in Lough Erne, then in Derryvullan Parish. Near by is Derrybrusk, where a branch of the Montgomery family was settled early in the seventeenth century by George Montgomery, Bishop of Clogher. At the western end of the churchyard.

‘This stone is modern, being erected by the fourth Earl of Belmore. He subsequently thought that Sarah Leslie, who died in 1747, and was wife of John Corry, was not buried at Derryvullan, but that her sister, Elizabeth Leslie, who died in 1733, was buried in the vault. Master Leslie Corry’s Christian name was John. Armar, first Earl of Belmore, inherited Castle Coole from his mother Sara, daughter of Colonel John Corry, and wife of Galbraith Lowry, of Aghenis, Co. Tyrone. Colonel James Corry in his Will desired that his son John should erect a monument at Derryvullan to him and his ancestors; no trace of it now exists, if it was ever erected.’

'No. 47. Vault at east end of old church.

'The Crawford family, of Carrowmacmea, Co. Fermanagh, had a vault in this churchyard, which is believed to be this one. Members of this family who are known to be buried at Derryvullan are firstly, Laurence Crawford of Carrowmacmea, who died 1731; secondly, Laurence, third son, Henry Crawford, of Millwood, Co. Fermanagh, who died 1755; thirdly, Henry's wife, who was a daughter of Captain Alexander Acheson, and predeceased her husband; fourthly, Jason Crawford (son of Lawrence's second son, Robert Crawford, of Aughnacloy, Co. Fermanagh), of Laurencetown, Co. Meath, who died 1769; and fifthly, John Crawford (second son of the above Jason), of Laurencetown, Co. Meath, who died circa 1808, and desired to be buried with his ancestors in the family vault at Derryvullan. Probably other members of the family are also buried here.

‘There is another tombstone to this family in the churchyard.’

MISCELLANEA.

Extracts from the Family Bible of Robert Walker of Andraid, near Randalstown, County Antrim, now in the possession of Mr. William F. Reynolds.

Robert Walker died on the 9th April, 1804, and was buried in the Drummaul Churchyard (see p. 193). His wife's name was Isabella Mann.

Extracts:—

“—as Walker was born ———uary the 9th 1781, the day of the week Tuesday half after two the afternoon.

“Robert Walker was born the 9th day of November, 1782, upon Saturday at 6 o'ck in the morning.

“William Walker was born the 2nd of May, 1784, upon the Sabbath day betwixt 7 & 8 of the clock in the afternoon.

“David Walker was born the 6th December, 1785, upon Monday betwixt 11 & 12 of the forenoon.

“James Walker was born the 30th day of July, 1787, upon Tuesday betwixt four & five in the afternoon.

“John Walker was born the 21st January, 1789, upon Wednesday after one in the morning.

“Hugh Walker was born the 5th of ——— 1790, about half after six, Monday.”

NOTES.

The following correction, received too late to be inserted on p. 196, deals with the Glenarm tombstone erected by William H. Burke. The inscription in the fifth and following lines should read as follows:—

A. R. Burke, eldest and surviving son | of the above-named Matthew Burke, | obit 10th Nov^r 1866, Ætat. 85 years. | 3rd June 1882, Anne, aged 50 years, | wife of the above-named | W^m Hamilton Burke. | Also the above-named W^m Hamilton Burke | obit 16th May 1887, Ætat. 66 years. | A.D. 1861.

Mr. H. C. Lawlor, in reference to the coat-of-arms at the top of the stone, writes:—“It might be of interest, and also obviate confusion in times to come, to note that although the Burke family of Glenarm many years ago caused the armorial bearings and coronet of the Clanrickarde family to be inscribed on their family tombstone, yet they have no evidence of relationship thereto."

Concerning Geoffrey de Cusack, Bishop of Meath.

I think I can solve a problem mentioned in the "Journal of the Association for the Preservation of the Memorials of the Dead," vol. viii, p. 407, viz.: the date of Geoffrey de Cusack, Bishop of Meath. Richard de la Corner is said—on what authority I do not know—to have died in 1250. Hugh de Tachmon was elected as his successor in the bishopric, and was confirmed by the Official of the Archbishop of Armagh. This was probably about the end of 1252, as the licence to elect was issued 29th June, 1252. But the Archbishop claimed that the election had lapsed to him, and appointed Cusack. Cusack died while the case was proceeding, and Tachmon was confirmed by the Archbishop on 2nd October, and by the Pope on 31st October, 1254. It is clear that Geoffrey de Cusack died a little earlier, probably in 1254.

I cannot give you the authority for each of my statements severally. But they are all covered by the following:—Cal. of Pat. Rolls, 1247, pp. 144, 167; Cal. of Docs. relating to Ireland, ii, 152, 315; Cal. of Papal Letters, i, 307, 312 (= Theiner, Monumenta, pp. 63, 65).

H. J. LAWLOR.

The Old Churchyards of Glenarm, County Antrim.

Mr. H. C. Lawlor, writing in September, 1913, states:—"It is three years ago since I recorded the tombstone inscriptions in Glenarm. I took a run down a few weeks ago to revisit the place. It is simply disgraceful the way the principal churchyard is kept. Anyone can, without let or hindrance, bury there. In doing so, old and interesting stones are being smashed, e.g. the old Hamilton stone is now in fragments. The old stone of John Sayers, 'Carpenter in Glenarm,' 1682 (vol. viii, p. 481), has been actually bodily removed, and is not now to be found," etc.

The Honorary Treasurer will be glad to receive such subscriptions as are due, both for this year and previous ones.

COUNTY GALWAY.

Ballinasloe Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘The old Churchyard of Ballinasloe lies a short distance outside the town on the County Roscommon side of the River Suck; the ruins of the old Protestant Church still stand, but they are of no architectural interest. One uncommon feature in the burial-ground is the number of tombstones whose inscriptions were still cut in raised letters till well into the nineteenth century.

‘The earliest dated tombstone appears not to be older than 1734; it is a little headstone standing near the south wall inside the church ruins; the inscription reads’ :—

HERE THE (sic) BODY OF GRCE (sic) O'BRIEN WHO DEPARTED HER LIF

Y 1734.

‘At the foot of the above is a flat slab bearing this inscription’ :—

‘Inside the ruins, on one of a row of flat slabs, occurs this inscription’ :—

Clonfert Cathedral.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘The Clonfert Cathedral has recently undergone some very necessary repairs, through the exertions of the Rector, Canon McLarney. It is famous for its western doorway, which is a unique example of a most elaborately carved series of recessed arches, surmounted by a high canopy in the Hiberno-Romanesque style of architecture; it is in splendid preservation, and the only pity is that so wonderful an example of the sculptor’s skill should bear no inscription in Irish to leave on record the names of the builder or of the person for whom it was erected.

‘The work of repairs includes the preservation of some ancient slabs, which are now secure from future damage by being built into walls inside the west end of the Church.

‘In the north wall is a slab bearing a slender cross down its length, with the following running round the edge’ :—

· DÑS · IOĒS · ET · RICARD · CALLANAN · PHICI · QVI · HIC · IACĒT ·
 + IHS MARIA · · TV ·
 · MVLV · FIERI · FECERV · ET · IOES · OBIIT · 13 · MAR · 1612 ·

A Cross with fleur-de-lys terminals.

‘In the south wall there is a row of several slabs, ancient and modern, including a slab ornamented with a Celtic cross, and, in deeply cut Irish characters, the name BECGAIN.

‘The older inscriptions read as follows’ :—

+ IHS · HIC · IACET SVIS FIE	DÑS · ROGER · HORAN · PRECIPV'	DOÑI 1616 ANO	SVE · NA TIOIS
	RI

‘In both these Latin inscriptions hot-water pipes hide the bottom of the slabs, but the illegible words are supplied from the Co. Galway Ordnance Survey Letters.’

‘The two Latin inscriptions have been incompletely or incorrectly given in the JOURNAL, vol. i, p. 370, and vol. vi, p. 559.’

Erected to the memory of M^{rs} Mary Martin, by Robert Martin, of Corribdale, her afflicted husband, in remembrance of her many virtues, his inexpressible grief, and the sudden termination of their happy union of 27 years pure wedded love, by her lamented death on the 30th September, 1833, in her 53rd year.

Erected to the memory of Robert Martin, Esq., of Corribdale, by Robert John Martin, A.M., T.C.D., his beloved son, to testify the heart felt grief and lasting sorrow of a mourning child, and to keep in grateful remembrance the many virtues and kindest affection of a loving parent, whose lamented death caused their temporary separation [sic] on the 20th May 1840. in the 71st year of his age.

The Toberbracken Blessed Well, Parish of Killeely.

‘Mr. Martin J. Blake, on p. 5, vol. viii of the Galway Archæological Society’s Journal, gives the inscription on a slab leaning against the wall surrounding the Blessed Well of Toberbracken, near Lavally House. The inscription reads’ :—

PRAY · FOR · THE · SOVLES
OF · IOHN · LINCH · FITCH · GEFFR
IE · FITCH · DOM · OF · GALLW
AY · AND · MAREY · LINCH · FITC

1645.

‘The FITCH, in the above inscription is a peculiar way of spelling FITZ meaning “son of” (or when it follows a female name “daughter of”).

‘A paper on the Lynches, of Lavally, was commenced in the Galway Archæological Journal, p. 65, vol. viii; it is written by Mr. Blake mentioned above.’

‘For another inscription recording these names, see under LAVALLY, at page 290.

COUNTY KILDARE.

Great Connell Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

BISHOP WELLESLEY'S TOMB.

‘Walter Wellesley was Prior of the Abbey of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Connell, in 1519. Ten years later he was made Bishop of Kildare, which bishopric, as well as the office of Prior of Connell, he held till his death in 1539, when he was buried in Connell Abbey. His monument took the form of an altar-tomb, the sides of which are now badly shattered, and many pieces are missing. On the covering-slab of the tomb lies the effigy of the Bishop, well and boldly cut. A Latin inscription, incised and in the black letter, runs down the two longer sides; it commences near the left side of the Bishop's head, and is continued from the top of the opposite side downwards; the date was never finished: the sculptor had completed the M and one C; then follow the outlines of two other C's; and so it remains. The head of the effigy rests under a canopy, which is supported on either side by an angel, each holding a shield bearing the Bishop's coat-of-arms, viz.—“Argent, on a cross sable, five escallops of the first.” The feet rest on a bracket, ornamented with a foliage design; and near the left foot are two paws of some animal that is now chipped off.

'The inscription (which has the usual contractions, and is in one or two places deficient of letters, owing to breaks in the stone), when perfect, ran as follows :—

Hic jacet frater Walterus Wellysley quondam episcopus Darensis ac hujus domus Comendatarius, cujus anime propitiatur Deus, Qui obiit Anno Domini MCCC (cxxxxix).

That is—

Here lies Friar Walter Wellysley, formerly Bishop of Kildare and Commendatory Prior of this House, on whose soul may God have mercy, who died in the year of the Lord 1539.

'The length of the slab is 6 feet 3 inches, and the breadth 3 feet 2 inches; the material is limestone. Its present position is on the left-hand side of the entrance-gate to the burial-ground; other portions of the tomb are also built over and on the other side of the gateway. The panel over the gate represents the crucifixion, with the Virgin Mary on our Lord's right, and St. John on the left. Another large panel contains the "Ecce Homo"; our Lord, clothed in the purple robe and crown of thorns, is shown seated, bound hand and foot, with a hammer, pincers, and rope near him. Below the "Ecce Homo" a double panel is built into the wall, measuring $27\frac{1}{2}$ inches in height; it contains two niches of different shapes, both elaborately ornamented with birds and floral devices. In one niche is a Bishop, and at his feet a toad and a snake, representing St. Patrick; in the other is a saint, holding in both hands a chalice, representing St. John.

'Small portions of other panels are built here and there into the gateway on the inside and outside, and another piece is serving as a headstone to a modern grave half-way down the burial-ground; while in the neighbouring burial-ground, called "the Reliceen," built into a low wall, are two portions of panels, probably belonging to this tomb, as one bears a shield with the Bishop's arms (described above), and the other represents a saint with a battle-axe in his right hand, and a long carpenter's saw in his left, the usual emblems of the brothers St. Simon and St. Jude.

'In the possession of the late Dr. J. M. Neale, of Newington House, near Feighcullen, five miles off as the crow flies, is a panel belonging to the Wellesley monument, which was several years ago carried off, and is now used as an ornament in the garden. In this case the panel contains a saint representing St. James the Less, as the figure holds a long club.

'It is more than likely that other portions of this tomb are scattered about the neighbourhood.'

KILLASHEE CHURCH IN 1789.

[From an illustration in the "Transactions of the Royal Irish Academy," vol. iii (1789).]

'On a tall, narrow, headstone at the west side of the churchyard':—

IHS
Here Lyeth
the Body of Patrick Kelly who died
Feb^y 6^h 1767
Aged 41 y^{rs}.
God Rest
his Soul.

'The headstones, with few exceptions, are heavily covered with ivy, completely hiding their inscriptions. The south and west sides of the churchyard are choked with scrub and dog-wood bushes, making it impossible to examine the ground for tombstones.

'The present Protestant church is of the usual plain type, and quite modern. The tower to which it is attached is ancient and very remarkable. It is square below, and round for the remainder upwards. It is not now its original height; a heavy coat of ivy completely hides its windows. An engraving of it is in the old "Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy." Another peculiar circumstance is that though Killashee means St. Usaille's (or Auxilius's) Church, yet the Blessed Well, a quarter of a mile away to the east, is dedicated to St. Patrick. St. Usaille's festival is on the 27th of August.'

Pollardstown Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This churchyard is situated near Rathbride, it is not of large size, though it contains the ruinous gable-ends of a fairly large church. The west wall contains three tall narrow lancet windows of cut stone, the middle window being higher than those at the side of it. The East window is a wide breach in the wall, but, judging by the remains of the crowns of three arches up in the gable, it was also a treble-lancet window, an unusual feature in country church ruins.

'The oldest headstone, bearing an inscription, is one standing in the breach in the east wall; the inscription reads':—

IHS
Here lyeth the | Body of Mauri= | ce Dunn who |
Departed this | Life November | the 28th in the | year of our | Lord God 1758 | and in the 65 | . . .

'The remainder of the inscription is buried; the lettering is a peculiar mixture of capitals and small letters.'

'On a large head-stone in the south portion of the churchyard, there is a peculiar inscription, which is hard to decipher owing to the lichen growing on the stone; as far as it can be made out it reads':—

I H S Cobawn O'Neill
Baptized Coneill by S^t Patrick Prince Coneill
He is in y^e 5th century.

King Laeogarius of Tara, Conall of domnuell
Patrick, Corbre, the three sons of King
Neill of the fourth century. here lies the Body of Patrick Conall of airther north who depart^d this life in 1710
Aged 50 years & his wife also Margare^t
Geoghegan of Ballinagor West meath departed this life in the 78 y^r of Jamestown. Wm Conall Maguire ag^d 73, and his wife Bridget terns.

Patrick, Bridget, and Collmkil may pray for the souls of those familys.
This Erected by Patrick Conally in Old Connell.

'Though this inscription is puzzling in places, and of course fabulous and incorrect at the commencement, yet it is a curious instance of a claim to an ancient descent.

'The date of the erection of the stone is not given.'

COUNTY KILKENNY.

Callan Abbey.

'Canon Carrigan, P.P., in his "History of the Diocese of Ossory," vol. iii, p. 313, states that there are only two ancient monuments in this Augustinian Abbey Church.

‘One, a large slab bearing a floriated cross in relief, and an unsculptured shield, but no inscription. The other lying beside it is a fragment of a floor-slab, also with an ornamental cross, and a “black letter” inscription round the edges, all in relief; the upper and lower portions of the slab are missing; what remains of the inscription is shown in the accompanying illustration’ :—

‘The sacred monogram I.H.S., and the name HANNA, appear in the lower portion of the slab.

‘Canon Carrigan reads the surname as O’Kavyn, and the date MccccLxxxix (1499).’

Gowran Church.

‘Inscription on a monument in Gowran Church, erected by Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Cuffe, of Castle Inch, or Inchyolaghan, to the memory of her husband, John Kelly, as given in Archdall’s Edition of Lodge’s Peerage of Ireland (vol. vi, p. 58)’ :—

To the pious Memory.

Here lieth the Body of

John Kelly of Kellymount, Esq’ who departed this Life in the year of Our Lord 1678, in the 36th year of His Age, thereby leaving Elizabeth Kelly, Eldest daughter of Jo^s Cuffe of Castle-
Inch, Esq’, his most afflicted Widow.

Here also lieth the Body of Joseph Kelly, Esq’, his eldest son, Recorder of the City of Kilkenny, who departed this Life in the year of Our Lord 1713, going on the 40th year of his Age, whose Parts and Integrity had rendered him a Useful Man to his Country, and an Ornament and Credit to his Family. After such Losses, nothing could make the Troubles of this Life supportable to his most sorrowful Mother, but the Hopes of rising together with them to the Glories of One, that shall be everlasting.

To their dear Memories she erected this Monument, under which she desires and expects to be interred, when it shall please God to prepare her for that blessed Exchange,
The 20th of July Anno Domini 1715.

Kilcruttin Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This burial-ground lies near the railway station on the outskirts of the town of Tullamore; it is closed against further interments. There is no trace of any building in it; it was used by all religions. In the south-east corner lies the tomb-slab of a priest; the inscription, which faces the west, reads '— pray for the soul of the Rever^d Mr James Guraghty

 Who Dep^d this life April y^e 4th 1798 aged 96 years.

On a handsomely carved limestone column, standing about the middle of the burial-ground, are cut the following two inscriptions, on either side of it, one in English and the other in German (small Roman type):—

Sacred

'The Baron Oldershausen was killed with many others in 1808 during a military riot in Tullamore, which took place between a German legion quartered there and some Irish Militia regiments, an account of which is given in Cooke's "History of Birr."'

'On a box-tomb':—

‘On a flat slab lying on the slope at the east side of the burial-ground is the following inscription faintly cut’ :—

35 years | His conversation among his Parish | ioners was such as to ensure their | regret at his departure
henc [sic], but their | grief returned unto their bosoms | for his hope was full of Immortality.

‘The clergyman may have been a Wesleyan minister, as other members of that persuasion are buried close by. There is no date on the slab, which belongs to the early nineteenth century.’

‘On a flat slab over a vault at the north-east end’ :—

Sacred to the memory of the | Rev^d James Stirling

‘On a box-tomb is an inscription to the memory of James McKee, “who for nearly 30 years faithfully laboured as an Itinerant Minister in the Wesleyan Methodist Society,” in Tullamore, and died on the 22nd April, 1805, aged 58.

‘On another box-tomb there is an inscription to the memory of the Rev. John Hodden, for twelve years Wesleyan Minister in Tullamore, who died on the 11th December, 1812; aged 61.’

Killeigh Abbey Burial-ground.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'All that remains of Killeigh Abbey is a long vaulted chamber on the north side of the burial-ground, on which side, too, is the Protestant church, which contains no old monuments.

'There is a slab lying flat, at the south-east end of the church-yard, on the top of which is carved a skull and cross-bones in high relief. The inscription is in very lightly incised Roman capitals, and now so lichen-covered as to be practically indecipherable. After spending considerable time and trouble in scraping the slab, all that could be recovered of the inscription reads ' :—

AN EPITAPH ON THE DEATH OF IOHN MOL-LOY MAPHILLIP WHO DECEASED ON THE NIN
TH DAY OF MAY 1676. HERE LIES BEFORE HIS TIME IOHN WHOSE SWIFT FATE CAUSED HIS DEATH EPITAPH. TWENTY YEARES FVLL DAIL (?)
HIS GALLANT BIRTH OR AGE OR WINNING FA

'Eight more lines follow, but they are past recovery. To add to the difficulty of deciphering the almost illegible letters is the fact that there are no divisions between the words. I take it that the Christian and surnames are intended to represent John, son of Philip O'Molloy.

'An attempt was made to decipher the O'Connor of Offally Latin inscription on a flat slab, lying near the east wall (north end) of the churchyard boundary wall, on page 99, vol. iii, of the JOURNAL. The first four lines are quite clear, viz. :—

HIC IACET HEROVN CLARO
DE STEMIMATE NATVS
DONATVS PATRIÆ CVRA
DOLORQVE SVÆ

‘Then comes a shield bearing the O’Connor coat-of-arms’ :—

“An oak tree, followed by a continuation of the inscription, thus ” :—

VNA SEPVLTA IACET TVMVLO
DONATIQUE PARENTVM
CASTA PYDICA PIA HÆC
CONIVX MATERQVE IOANNIS
NECNON DONATI MATER
SIC PAV

‘The remainder of this long epitaph is quite illegible, except for a few letters here and there ; most of the last lines given above (if correct) were only recovered after an immense amount of trouble. There is, however, sufficient proof that two of the O’Connor family are mentioned on the slab, “Donatus,” i.e. Donough, and John.

‘The inscription probably belongs to the latter end of the seventeenth century.

‘The oak tree, as the arms of the O’Connors of Ofaly, is incorrect, as it is the arms of the O’Connors of Connaught, a quite distinct clan. The O'Connor of Offaly arms are:—"Azure, a bar argent, between two bars or."

'Over this O'Connor slab, which now covers a vault, there is a mural tablet built into the churchyard wall, thus inscribed':—

Una jacet
Elizabetha B·· Morris clerici vidua,
Mau. N·· O'Connor
Filia et cohæres, vixit annos 57, obiit
MDCCCLXI.
Quam deus dedit, deus abstulit,
Benedicatur ejus nomen.

'At the foot of the slab, as a door to the vault, is a slab bearing this inscription':—

Una jacet ex eadem gente
Mau. N·· O'Connor
obiit MDCCXVIII
vixit annos 63.
Nomen ejus inscripsit nepos
Gul: O'Connor Morris

'At the head of a small enclosure, alongside of the O'Connor vault, also built into the churchyard wall, is a slab thus inscribed':—

Una Jacet
Catherina
Primis Nuptis
Johannis Comitiss De Desart, Secundis R·· Price, armigeri,
Amata conjux
Vixit annos 75
Obiit MDCCCLXXIV

'These last three inscriptions refer to the family of Maurice Nugent O'Connor, of Mount Pleasant alias Gortnamona, near Tullamore, who died without surviving male issue in 1818, leaving by his wife, Maria, daughter of Sir Thomas Burke, Bart., of Marblehill, County Galway, four daughters:—

1. Catherine, married, firstly, John Otway, Earl of Desart, who died in 1820; and secondly, Rose Lambard Price, eldest son of Sir Rose Price, Bart. She died in 1874.
2. Mary, married Hugh Morgan Tuitt, of Sonna, County Westmeath.
3. Julia, died unmarried in November, 1850.
4. Elizabeth, who married the Rev. Benjamin Morris, ancestor of the O'Connor-Morris, now of Gortnamona, for whom consult Burke's "Landed Gentry."

Carrigtampul Churchyard.

[From Mr. F. J. Bigger.]

‘About a mile south of O’Rourke’s Castle, on a high central hill, with the most beautiful mountain and lake views on every side, lies the very old graveyard of Carrigtampul. It is crowded with burials, and still in use. The commonest name on the tombstones is O’Dolan. There is one to O’Connor inscribed as follows’ :—

Beneath this tomb lies the remains of John O’Connor who departed this life Nov^r 24th 1818, aged 73 y^{rs}.
 Deserved to be lamented by all his Acquaintances.
 Requiescant in Pace.

‘The stone is now broken, and likely to be further injured. Above the inscription is an ornamented coat-of-arms. The shield bears a lion rampant; the crest is a mailed arm embowed holding a sword upright. Many of the old graveyards in North Breffni which I visited are in a shockingly neglected condition.’

CO. MEATH.

Dunmoe Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘Dunmoe lies three miles to the north-east of Navan, on the northern bank of the Boyne. The churchyard is a very small one, with only some five or six lettered headstones. Of the church ruins little but the west gable stands; it contains a pointed arched window of cut-stone in perfect condition, with a square “eye-brow” or drip-stone over it.

‘A doorway, also with a cut-stone pointed arch, exists in the south wall, and near it projects a stone-vaulted roofed chamber communicating with the little church by a doorway; below this chamber is a sepulchral vault which now is empty except for loose boulders which have been rolled into it. A built-up entrance is visible at the gable end of the chamber, which appears to have been a mortuary chapel, possibly in connexion with Dunmoe Castle, the ruins of which rise to a great height just outside the precincts of the burial-ground. Of these castle ruins, once of large extent, only the southern side now remains, at each corner of which is a high, circular tower; in the intervening wall large window-like apertures, arched with brick, have been inserted in the top story. A branch of the Darceys of Platten resided here in old times. There is but one lettered headstone, of large size, in the burial-ground outside the church ruins; on it is inscribed':—

I.H.S

Erected | by Mary McCann in memory | of her husband
Nicholas M^c Cann who dep^d this life | March 24th,
1805, aged 80 years. | Also his brother Thomas | dep^d
May 17th 1805 aged 76 years.

'Inside the church ruins there are four lettered tombstones (one a modern Brennan headstone, and the other a Darcy obelisk-like tomb); the older two are headstones thus inscribed':—

HERE

OF THOMAS CASSERLY WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 5 DAY OF APREL IN THE
YEARE 1722.

'Below this inscription in a square panel is carved in relief a skull and cross-bones, now buried in the soil.

'The other headstone bears this inscription':—

I.H.S

Here Lyeth The Body of | Mary Darcy who depart^{ed} |
This Life y^e 10th of Iune 1726 | Aged 16 years. Likewise the | Body of m^r Iohn Darcy | Who died Oct^{ber} y^e 12th
1740 | Aged 20 years.

‘The bowl portion of a plain octagonal-sided font lies inside the church ruins; the interior of the bowl is round, with the perforation in the centre.’

Dunsany Church Ruins.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘Standing in the chancel of these ruins is a Plunkett altar-tomb belonging to the fifteenth century; for its better preservation, it is now roofed over; the sides were not re-erected, being badly broken, they are placed in the sedilia and a side recess in the ruins.

‘This altar-tomb is uninscribed; a description and illustration of it by Mr. T. J. Westropp appeared in the “Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland,” vol. xxiv, pages 224–228, for the year 1894.

‘The covering slab bears the effigies of a knight and his wife in the horned head-dress of the period; the feet of the knight rest on a dog, and those of his wife on a cushion embroidered with two eagles between which is a (?) cat’s head.

‘One end-slab of the sides has a representation of the chastisement of our Lord in a central panel, with an angel swinging a censor in the panels on either side; in the opposite end a bishop or saint occupies each of the three panels.

‘The two longer sides are each divided into five niches, richly floriated, and, though empty, coats-of-arms on shields occupy the spaces between the niche-heads. On one side appear, from left to right, the arms of Plunket, Fleming (?), Castlemartin (three towers), and Plunkett, impaling FitzGerald or FitzEustace. On the other side are shields bearing the arms of Plunkett, on another FitzGerald or FitzEustace, on the third a heart pierced by two swords saltire-wise, and on the fifth a cross and some emblems of the Crucifixion.

‘Possibly the knight represents Sir Christopher Plunkett, Kt. (second son of Sir Christopher of Killeen), who is generally considered to have been the first Baron of Dunsany, and who died in 1462. He was twice married—first to Anne FitzGerald, daughter to Richard FitzGerald, of Ballyshannon, a younger son of Maurice, 4th Earl of Kildare; and secondly to Elizabeth Preston, daughter of Robert, first Viscount Gormanston. He left issue by his first wife. His will is printed on page 198, vol. vi, of Archdall’s edition of “Lodge’s Peerage of Ireland”; and on page 357 of the Calendar of Carew Manuscripts (Miscellanea).

‘As the altar-tomb bears no inscription, and the Preston arms do not appear on it, it strikes one that it may have been erected during the lifetime of Sir Christopher.

‘Yet, as Sir Christopher Plunkett in his will, mentioned above, desires his body to be buried in the chancel of the church at Killeen, it is just possible that the Dunsany tomb may belong to his son and successor, Richard Plunkett, 2nd Lord Dunsany, who died between 1474 and 1482; his wife was Joan, daughter of Sir Rowland FitzEustace, Baron of Portlester, whose family arms are :—" Or, a saltire gules "; and when sculptured on a stone are identical with the FitzGerald arms :—" Argent, a saltire gules "; hence the shield on the side of the tomb may be either the FitzGerald or the FitzEustace arms.

'Of the two, it is more probable that the tomb belongs to the latter Lord Dunsany.

THE FONT AT DUNSANY.

[From a photograph by Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'A fifteenth-century font, bearing coats-of-arms and saints, similar to those on the tomb, is now placed in a recess in the north wall of the nave.

'To the left of the east window of the chancel, on the inside, there is a mural monument surmounted by the O'Neill crest and arms, viz. :—

'The crest :—" An arm embowed in armour, holding in the gauntlet a sword.

'The arms :—" Argent, two lions rampant combatant gules, supporting a sinister hand couped at the wrist gules ; in chief three mullets gules ; and in base a salmon naiant proper.

'These are the arms of the O'Neills of Upper Clandeboy (recte Clannaboy), a member of which family was created a baronet in 1643, a title which has been dormant since 1799.

'Below the arms runs the following inscription':—

HERE LYETH THE BODY OF S^R
BRYAN O'NEILLE BAR^T ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE KINGS BENCH IN THE REIGN
OF KING JAMES 2ND, AND DYED Y^E 17 OF OCT^{BER}
1697. AND Y^E BODY OF DAME MARY HIS WIFE
SISTER TO THE LORD DUNSANY. AND THE BODY OF DAME MARY O'NEILLE ALS BAGOT WHO DYED MARCH THE 1ST 1714 WHO WAS WIFE TO S^R HENRY O'NEILLE THE S^D S^R BRYAN'S SON, WHO ERECTED THIS TOMB ANNO DOMINI 1716

'The O'Neill baronetage was created in November, 1643, in the person of Sir Bryan macOwen O'Neill of Dublin; he died in 1670, leaving issue by his first wife, Jane Finch, a son also named Bryan.

'Sir Bryan, 2nd baronet, was of Backerstown, County Dublin; he married Mary, sister of Christopher Plunkett, Baron of Dunsany, and widow of James Wolverston (obit April, 1666), of Stillorgan, County Dublin; she died in 1699; his death, as stated on the slab, occurred on the 17th October, 1697. His son and heir was Sir Henry O'Neill, 3rd baronet, of Kellystown, near Drogheda, who was twice married—first, to Mary, daughter of Mark Bagot, of Mount Arran (now Mount Wolesley, and formerly Crosslow) in the County Carlow; secondly, to Rose, daughter of Captain James Brabazon. Sir Henry O'Neill died on the 1st November, 1759, aged 85, and was buried in the old church at Monk Newtown, County Meath.

'Since the death of Sir Francis O'Neill, 7th baronet, in 1799, this title has been dormant. [See the "Complete Baronetage," by G. E. C.]

'The burial-ground outside the ruins is of small dimensions, extending on the west and south sides.

'The inscriptions do not date before the eighteenth century; the two earliest on the south read as follows':—

T E 12

+

I H S

HERE LYETH THE | BODY OF IOHN | DICKSON WHO | DEPARTED
THIS | LIFE APRIL Y^E 12TH | 1739 | AGED 65 YEARS.

'The remainder of the inscriptions are among the earliest on the west side':—

WILLIAM Durham who dyed Aprell
y^e 25th 1721 Aged 54
years.

FENNOR QUA DEO

THE INSCRIPTION ON A STONE IN THE CHURCHYARD AT FENNOR, CO. MEATH.

[From a rubbing by Lord Walter FitzGerald, 1910.]

A VERY EARLY EFFIGY AT PAINESTOWN CHURCH,
CO. MEATH.

[From a photograph by Mr. G. H. Orpen.]

Fennor Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This is a small burial-ground standing above the Boyne on the opposite side to the village of Slane. Close beside it is the so-called "Fennor Castle," which more resembles a modern farm-house of three stories than anything else; it is roofless.

'The ruins of Fennor Church are so covered with ivy that its shape is hard to define; at its south-east end is a vaulted addition, showing the impressions of the wattle-work on which the arch was turned.

'The interior of the ruins is choked with briars and elder-bushes, but it does not appear to contain any tomb-slabs.

'In the little burial-ground lettered headstones are scarce; one, apparently the oldest, bears this inscription':—

I.H.S.

This Stone and Burial P lace Belongeth to William Roarch of Fenner
And his Posterity. Here
Lieth the Body of his Son
Patrick Roarch who depart^{ed}
This Life September the 9th
AD 1757. Aged 18 years.

'In the south-east corner of the burial-ground, sunk in the ground, is the base of a cross which must have been of considerable size, as the socket is 10 inches in depth, and 15 inches long by 9½ inches wide; the base measures 2½ feet one way by 2 feet 2 inches the other. There are no traces of the remainder of the cross.

'Near the churchyard gate, being used as a headstone, is the portion of a mullion-like stone, measuring 3 feet in length, 9½ inches wide, and 6 inches in thickness; along the length of one face runs a fragment of an inscription in incised black-letter (already given in vol. ii, p. 346, of the JOURNAL); the opposite face is smooth and plain, and the sides are grooved. What form this monument took is a puzzle, considering the narrowness of the stone and the fact of its being neatly chiselled on all sides. The missing portions contained the names. What is left of the inscription reads':—

. . . de Millkinstone Generosi qua Katharina . . .

. . . ille quidem ano dni 1548 et 24 mes . . .

februarii illa vero [unfinished]

‘Neither the Fiants nor the Inquisitions give one a clue to the possessors of Wilkinstown about this date.’

Painestown Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘A modern Protestant Church stands in this burial-ground, which contains nothing of antiquarian interest; the earliest dated headstone bears the following inscription’ :—

Here lyeth the Body | of Iohn Keonan who | Departed this Life the 29th | day of September in | the year of our Lord 1737 | Aged 53 Also the Body | of Mary
Keonan alias Coyle | who departed this Life the 9th | of February 1767 aged 75 years.

‘There is a very early effigy, now headless, of an (?) ecclesiastic, placed for safety in the tower of the church; it bears no inscription, but a raised floral device runs along the edges of the slab. It formerly lay in the churchyard, and was placed under shelter by the present Rector, Dr. Harvey. On the opposite page is an illustration of the effigy made from a photograph taken by Mr. Goddard H. Orpen.

Slane Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘The ruins of this monastery and church are extensive, and in charge of the Board of Works, as a national monument. The burial-ground, strange to relate, appears to contain no lettered slabs of any ancient date, with the exception of one rather doubtful slab, now in fragments, only three portions of which are now visible.

‘The slab originally was broader at the upper than at the lower end, and bore an eight-armed cross with fleur-de-lys terminals cut in relief.

‘Of the three fragments, one belongs to the upper end, as it contains one of the cross’s eight arms. The second piece is portion of the slab just below the head; on it, on the left-hand side of the cross-shaft, is carved a chalice, and on the opposite side a square object. The third piece belongs to the lower end of the slab, and showed the cross-shaft standing on two or three steps, while at the very foot is the name W. Kenwan (or Keuwan). Judging by the rather Roman capital style of the W's, and the general appearance of the slab, I would date it about the early seventeenth-century period. Except for the name given above, there is no appearance of an inscription anywhere else on the fragments; possibly the name here given was that of the sculpturer of the slab.

Mountmellick Church.

[From Mr. W. G. Strickland.]

Within the narrow limits of this tomb repose the mortal remains of Major-General Thomas Hayes of the East India Company's Service, who departed this life the 2nd of September, 1831, aged 72 years. He was distinguished as an officer by an ardent zeal for his profession; perfect integrity and unquestionable personal intrepidity and courage. In private life his conduct was marked by a devoted love of truth and desire to administer to the wants and alleviate the distress of the poor.

COUNTY ROSCOMMON.

Roscommon Abbey.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The only monument of any real interest in this abbey is that of the effigy of King Felim mac Cathal Croiderg O'Connor, who died in 1265. It is one of only two regal effigies now existing in Ireland, and has been fully described at p. 353, vol. ii, of the JOURNAL.

'On a flat slab, near the King's effigy, in the choir, is an inscription now difficult to decipher; it reads':—

Grangemoockler Churchyard.

‘Several years ago (about 1899) Mr. John Cummins, a National School Teacher at Desert, near Cuffe’s Grange, sent in a faint rubbing on coarse calico of a fragment of a seventeenth-century slab, lying in the churchyard at Grangemoockler; but it is not suitable to make a block from. Unfortunately the upper and lower portions of the slab are broken off, and the names are not legible; still it is well to have this fragment on record, and future investigations in the churchyard may bring other portions of the slab to light.

‘As far as can be made out, the lettering ran lengthways on the slab parallel to the shaft of the cross; what is decipherable runs thus’ :—

‘White marble tablet on slate’ :—

Sacred to the memory of Maria, Baroness Dunalley, who departed this mortal life at Kilboy, October 15th 1819, aged 37 years. Eminently gifted by nature, and highly cultivated by education, few have more adorned and graced an exalted situation in society. Her mind, and spotless bosom was the seat of religion, pure and undefiled, and the holy precepts the constant and unerring guide of all her ways. To stimulate the inestimable advantages of learning to the rising generation, to minister to the wants of the widow, the orphan, and the distressed, she assiduously applied every energy of her active and comprehensive mind. Summoned by her Almighty Creator in the bloom of youth from this transitory world, her fortitude, piety, and resignation, were abundantly conspicuous. To commemorate her virtues and exalted worth, to stimulate her example, and to testify his deep sense of his severe loss, her devoted and lamenting husband has caused this tablet to be erected.

‘Over the inscription, and surmounted by a baron’s coronet, are the arms of Prittie impaling Trant.’

'Large white marble tablet, set in Gothic frame of sandstone. Below the inscription, and surmounted by a baron's coronet, are the arms of Prittie impaling Maude.'

Sacred to the memory of Henry Sadleir Prittie, Baron Dunalley, Rep^e Peer, who departed this life at Kilboy on 19 October 1854, in the 80th year of his age.

"I have no trust, but in God and Jesus Christ.

"This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." John, vi. 29.

Also of Emily, his second wife, daughter of Cornwallis 1st Viscount Hawarden. Born 1794. Died February 10th 1884.

'White marble tablet':—

Sacred to the memory of the Very Rev^d Gilbert Holmes, Dean of Ardfert, in Kerry, for 45 years, the much esteemed Rector of this Parish. He died December 23rd 1846, aged 75 years.

This tablet is erected in remembrance of him by his much attached widow.

'White marble tablet':—

Sacred to the memory of Lieut. General Sir William Parker Carrol, C.B., K.C.H., who departed this mortal life at Tulla House, July 2nd 1842, aged 66.

‘Close to above there is another large flat slab inscribed to members of the Baillie family, and bearing their arms. After much cleaning, time did not permit the inscription to be copied, the stone being old and badly weather-worn. A reference to a Baillie who was an ensign at the siege of Derry was observed on this slab.’

COUNTY WATERFORD.

Annestown Church.

[From Mrs. S. de C. O’Grady.]

‘There is only one tablet inside the church on the south wall, viz’ :—

To the memory of Lieut. John Richard Palliser 1st Royal Regiment 2nd Battalion, who died of fever at Tier-sin* China on the 29th of August 1860 aged 25 years. This monumental Tablet was erected by Lieut. Col. Urquart and the officers of his Regiment as a memorial of their regard and esteem for those amiable qualities and high principles which marked his conduct among them as an officer, a gentleman, and a friend. “I know that my Redeemer liveth.”

* I suppose this is a stonecutter’s mistake, as surely it ought to be Tien-Sin.

'The following Inscriptions are on the windows':—

'East window':—

In memory of the Rev. John Bury Palliser, born Feb 4th 1791, died April 8th 1864.

'On the north side':—

In loving memory of Wray Bury Palliser died April 4th 1906 aged 75 years.

'North side':—

She stretched forth her hands to the poor yea she reached forth her hands to the needy.

In loving memory of Maria Palliser died January 10th 1896. Erected by her sorrowing husband Wray B. Palliser.

The Font was—Erected by the Congregation of Annestown Church in memory of the Rev^d George Swanton Sweetnam B.A. for six years curate of this parish who died July 11th 1904. Deeply & deservedly regretted.

Dungarvan, the Augustinian Abbey Burial-ground.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'The ruins of this abbey consist of the eastern end of the church in ruins, the fine central tower of which is in repair and incorporated with the modern Roman Catholic Church. They stand near the MacCragh Castle ruins on the opposite side of the Dungarvan river to the town; this portion is known as "Abbeyside."

'On an altar-tomb, inside the ruins, is the following inscription':—

Coat-of-Arms :—Two Bars.

Supporters :—Cockatrices.

Here lieth the Body of Edw^d Nugent
Shanahan, Esq^r., who Dep^d this life March
The 3rd 1762, Aged 35 years.

Also Barbara his Wife who Dep^d this life
(no date given)

Also Harriet Nugent Shanahan their Daughter, Aged 6 years.

And Edward their son, & grand Daughter Elizabeth Humble Age^d 4 y^{rs}

This Tomb was Erected to their Memory by their Dear Daughter
Elizabeth Humble, Anno Do. 1785.

Also the Body of Elizabeth Nugent Shanahan humbel (sic), Daughter of the a bove Edward Nugent Shanahan, Esq^r and Heairs, who departed this life the 14th Day of September 1795 And in the Forty fourth year of her age. She liv^d beloved of all her Friends and neig hbours and Died (sic) lamented, very charitable to the poor.

Here also lieth the Remains of the late lamented Sir Iohn Nugent Humble, Bart, of Cloncoskoran House, who departed this Life January 13th 1834, Aged 53 years.

'According to Burke's "Peerage" (under Nugent of Cloncoskoraine), a Captain Charles Humble, of the 45th regiment, married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Edmund (? Edward) Nugent Shanaghan, of Cloncoskoran, County Waterford, and had a son, Sir John Nugent Humble, of Cloncoscoran, created a Baronet in 1831, grandfather of the present Sir John Nugent Nugent, 3rd Baronet, who assumed the surname of Nugent only, as representing, in the female line, the Nugents of Cloncoskoran. The latter were descended from Edward Nugent, second son of Richard, 10th Baron of Delvin, who married, in the fifteenth century, Joan, daughter and heir of Richard Butler of Cloncoskoran.'

'Under a round-headed opening of cut-stone, near the eastern end of the north wall of the abbey ruins, is a limestone slab much below the present ground-level. A large amount of sod, clay, and stones had to be removed before the slab was laid bare; it measures 6 feet 4 inches in length, and not less than 3 feet 6 inches in breadth; one of the longer sides is in a broken condition, and the inscription along its edge is consequently missing; the lower end of the slab, too, is much weather-worn and chipped, so that here, too, the inscription is illegible. An unusual feature in this slab is that the middle portion is quite plain; the inscriptions which run round the edge give no information about the Donnell MacCragh commemorated, except the date of his death; they are cut in the "black-letter" characters, except the capital letters and a part of the date, which are in Lombardic letters; what is legible reads (the contractions being expanded)':—

Hic iacet donaldus MacCragh qui obiit xxvii^o die mensis Martii anno do' M^oCC^oCC^oCC^o Septuagesimo . . .

'The remainder of this third line probably continued with the words cuius anima, as below it are the words (expanded):—

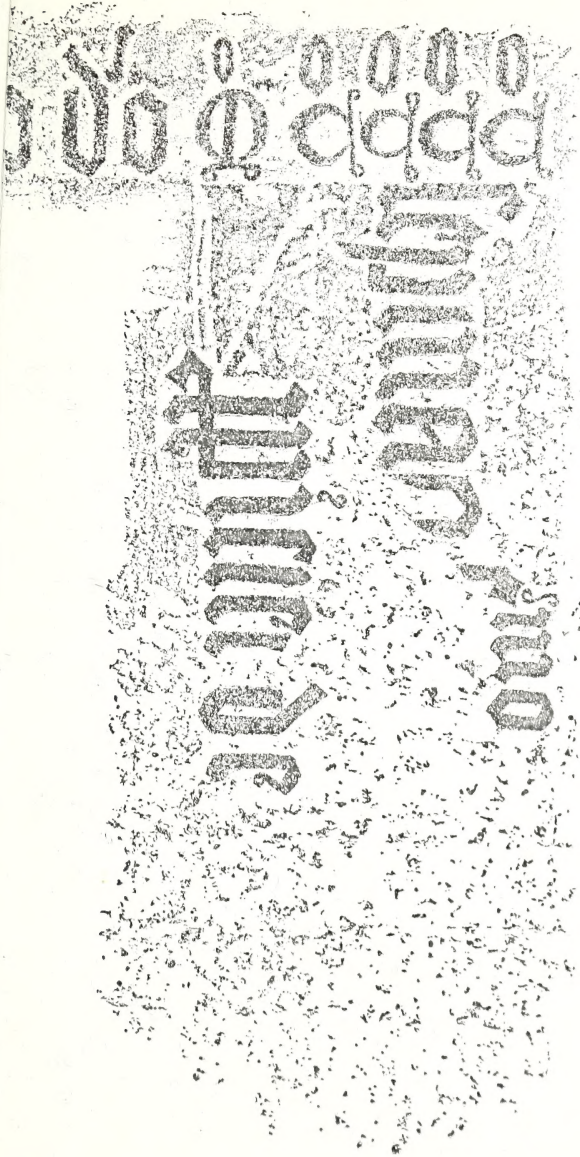

propicietur deus

'There is the commencement of another supplication on the other long side, which begins (expanded):—

Orate pro s[ibi] . . .

and then the damaged state of the slab prevents any more words from being deciphered.

'Though the MacCraghs were a County Waterford sept, in no way connected with the MacGraths or Magraths of the County Donegal, yet their descendants now style themselves McGrath, thereby losing their local identity.

'There is in St. Carthach's Cathedral at Lismore a magnificent altar-tomb, unique of its sort, erected by the MacCragh family in the middle of the sixteenth century, which is described further on in this number of the JOURNAL.

'A well called "Toberacaut" is situated in the small field on the opposite side of the road (the Friar's Walk) to the Abbey. The 6-inch Ordnance Survey map marks it down as "St. Catherine's Well."'

Dunhill Churchyard.

[from Mrs. S. de C. O'Grady.]

'In the churchyard of the ruined church of Dunhill, close to the ancient Castle, I have copied the following, all very difficult to read, as many are lying almost on their faces, while others were entirely covered with sods; of course I am sure there are as many more, but they were beyond me without a spade.

The church, of which only a very small portion of the east and west ends remains, looks as if it dated back to an early date; and I was much disappointed at not finding stones of an earlier date. Between Dunhill, which is distant about one mile from Annestown, is a curious obelisk standing on a mound in a swamp, built, I think, of cement and stone, and which no one could tell me the history of, though I asked several people, and they said their fathers did not know; there is no inscription on it as far as I could see; it may have been to mark the spot where an exceptionally high tide came to or where some one or other was killed.

Here Lyeth the Body of John Hassard of Grants Town Esq
Who Departed this life July 1802
Aged 58 years.

Here also are deposited the remains of

‘I see in Ryland’s “Waterford” (p. 79) that he speaks of a tomb to the Countess of “Don Isle,” and also a stone figure. I did not know of these when at Dunhill, but I could find no trace of either. There is one small tombstone with a cross and no inscription—an upright stone—but it did not look very ancient.

OUTSIDE THE CATHEDRAL.

'The burial-ground surrounding the cathedral is a large one, with numerous headstones and box-tombs, many of which are so completely covered with ivy that it is impossible to read their inscriptions. There appear to be none of a date earlier than the eighteenth century; the oldest I came across only went back to 1737. All the inscriptions given below were copied from tombs on the east and south-east side of the burial-ground.'

‘There are five small Irish inscribed slabs, in a fragmentary state, built into the west wall of the nave. The inscriptions on them are thus given in Petrie’s “Christian Inscriptions in the Irish Language,” vol. ii, pp. 30-32’ :—

1. benoacht pop anmair Colgen (A blessing on the soul of Colgan).
2. Suibne m̄ conhur̄ip (Suibne son of Cu-odhar).
3. benoacht pop aī maptain (A blessing on the soul of Martan).
4. Op do copmac p (Pray for Cormac P).
5. Op do donnachad (Pray for Donnchad).

THE MACCRAGH ALTAR-TOMB.

'This magnificent tomb, in good preservation, stands at the north-west end of the nave of the cathedral; the sides are divided into highly decorated ogee-headed panels, each containing a saint with their emblems; while every inch of the covering slab is covered with inscriptions and religious subjects, making this tomb unique for its wealth of carving.

THE COVERING SLAB.

'This slab measures 8 feet 4 inches in length, and 3 feet 8 inches in breadth. Each corner contains an emblem of the four evangelists':—

An eagle for St. John.

A winged lion for St. Mark.

An angel for St. Matthew.

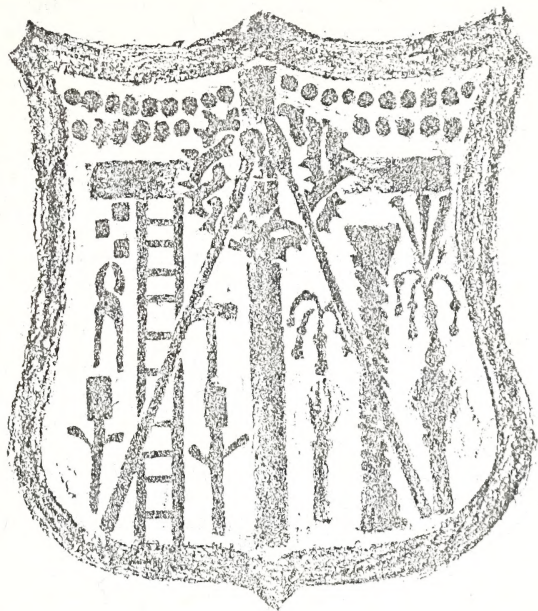

A winged ox for St. Luke.

'An eight-armed cross, with fleur-de-lys terminals to the arms, occupies the middle of the slab. Below the arms are two shields bearing religious symbols and instruments, viz.':—

'1. That on the left has a heart pierced with seven swords, emblematic of the Blessed Virgin Mary, a crowned M is placed above the heart, and a crowned A below it. Round the edge of the shield is the salutation :—ave maria, gracia plena, domin' te cum.

'2. That on the right bears the implements of our Lord's passion and crucifixion; a cross and crown of thorns in the middle, and over them the thirty pieces of silver.

'To the left of the cross-shaft is a pole with a sponge for the vinegar, three dice, a pincers, a ladder, a hammer, and two reeds ("cats' tails").

'To the right of the shaft is a spear, three nails, two knotted scourges, two birch rods, and the flogging-post.

'On the left-band side of the eight-armed cross-shaft is the papal-tiaraed kneeling figure of St. Gregory (Pope from 590-604) offering up the Host, with the chalice and the wafer bearing an I.H.S. on an altar in front of him; over this subject is carved S. Gregori'; his festival is the 12th March.

'On the right side of the cross-shaft is the "Behold the Man," representing a half-length of our Lord, stripped and bound. By His head is cut the legend Ecce homo, and below is an I.N.R.I. in Roman capitals.

'Beneath this last subject is a cock in full plumage, standing up in a three-legged pot or skillet. This refers to the denial of our Lord by St. Peter. Tradition states that St. Peter was by the fireside at the far end of the judgment hall when our Lord was being questioned by Pontius Pilate, and that after his third denial a cock which was being cooked on the fire stood up in the pot and crowed.'

THE INSCRIPTIONS.

'A circular band interlaces the arms of the cross; on this is cut the supplication in the eight spaces, commencing in the space which corresponds with 10 o'clock on a watch':—

pater et ave credo quor aiab' ppiciet deus amen (i.e. an Our Father and a Hail Mary, a Creed, on whose souls may God have mercy Amen).

'On the scroll forming a frame to three sides of the cross-head is cut the following text from the Psalms, commencing on the right':—

de profundis clamavi ad te dnē dnē exaudi voce meam et auget aures i.e. Out of the depths have I cried unto Thee, O Lord. Lord, hear my voice, let thine ears (be attentive to the voice of my supplications).

'On the shaft of the cross are the words':—

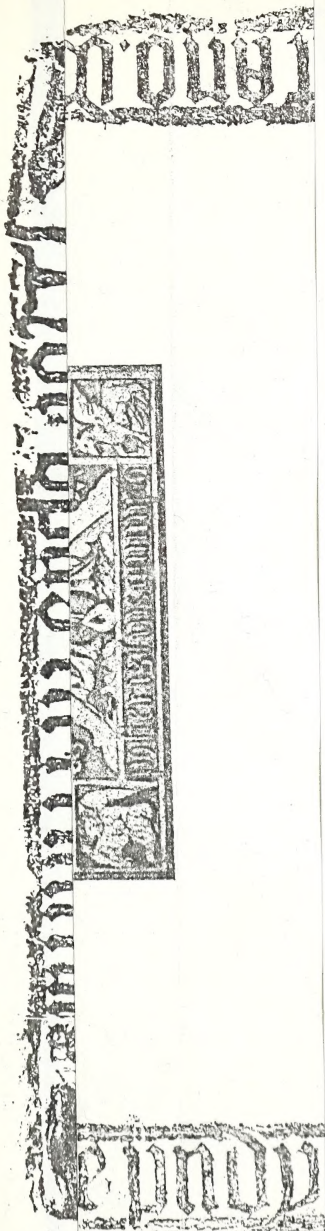

crux vincit omnia mala (i.e. the cross overcomes all sins).

'The inscription proper runs round the edge of the slab; it begins at the top near the Eagle symbol, in the direction of the Winged Lion, and reads':—

Hoc opus fieri fecerut Jobes mcragh & uxor sua Katherine thome pudyrgast tibi et posteris fu[is q]ui in ipso sepeliendi fut ano. do. 1557. In [eo]† ecia sepl't 'cft donald' mcragh. ano. do. 1548.

* In connexion with this inscription, Mr. J. R. Garstin states that the text is from Psalm cxxx. 1 (Vulgate version), except the last three words, which probably represent the "Fiant aures tuae," etc., of verse 2. ("Journal R.S.A. Ire.," volume for 1904, p. 300.)

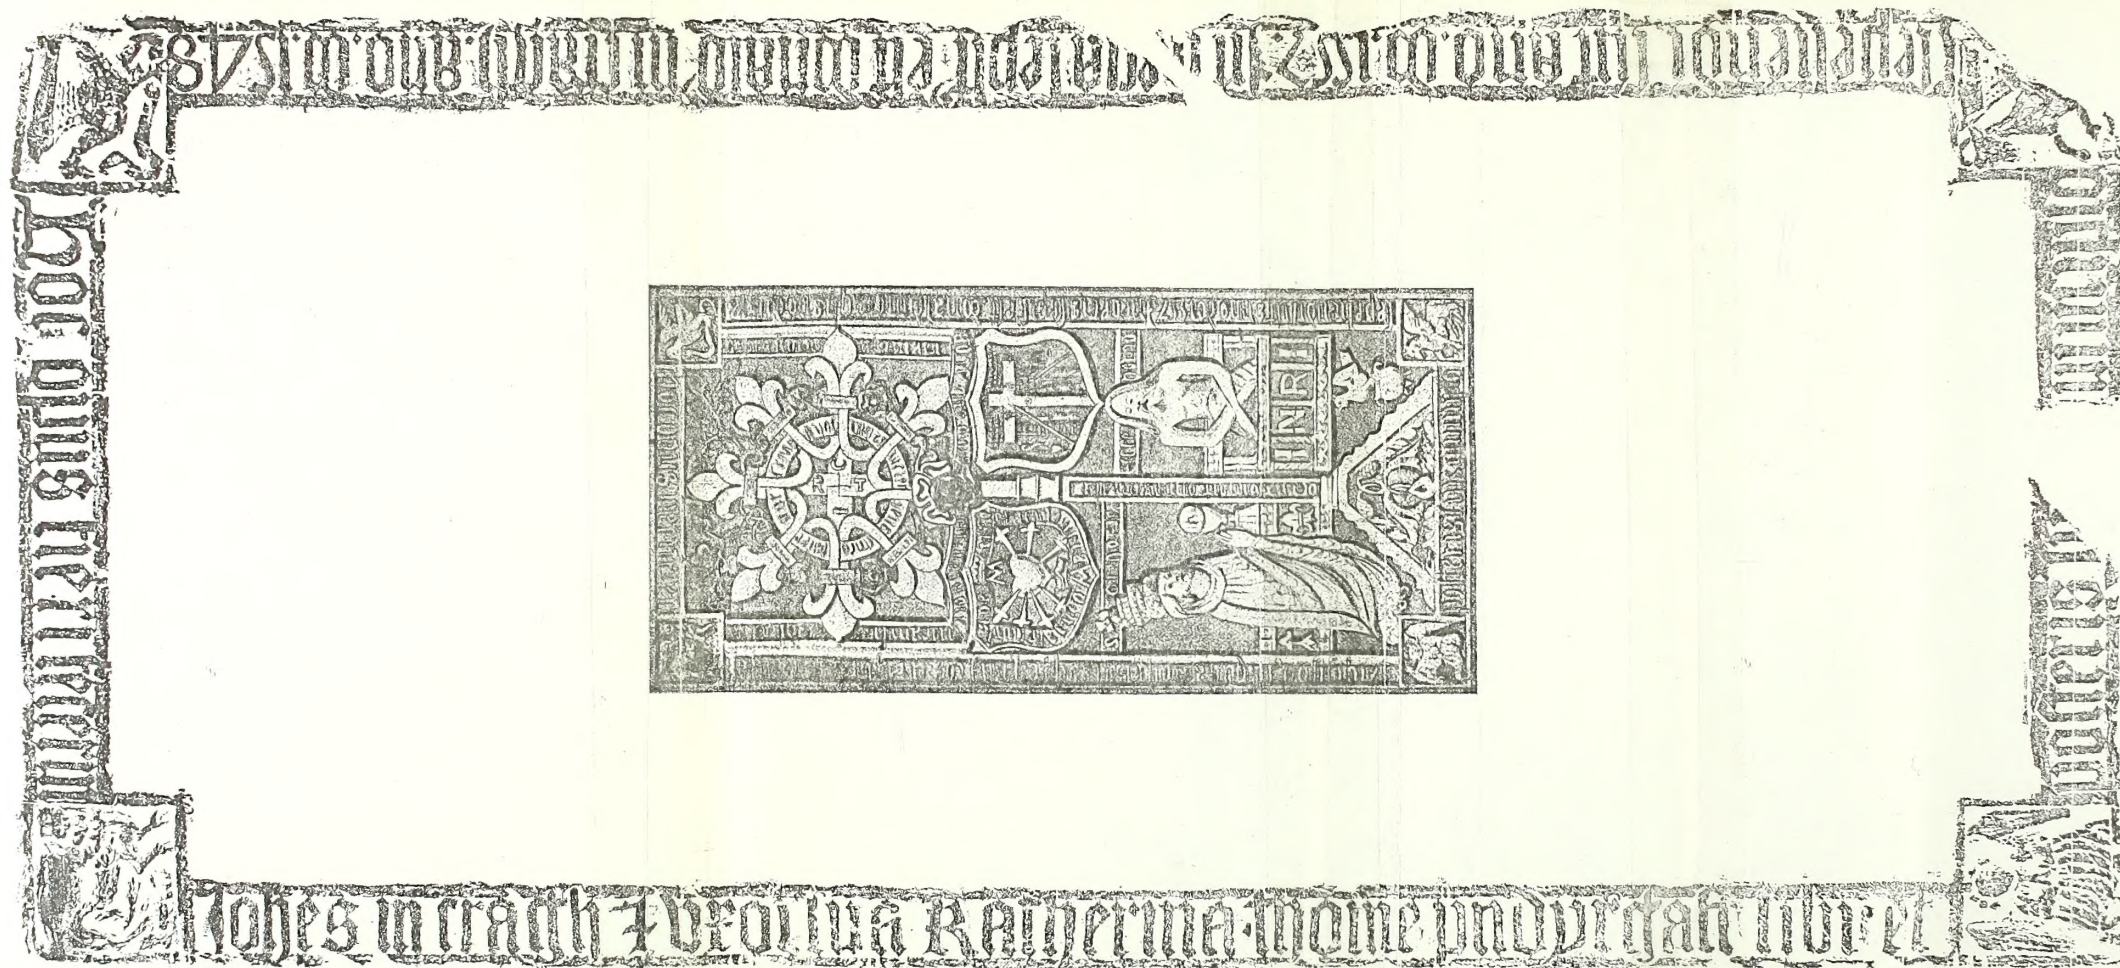

† Owing to a break in the slab, this word is lost; but it is supplied by Mr. J. R. Garstin as the only possible reading.

THE INSCRIPTION ROUND THE EDGES OF THE COVERING SLAB.

[From a rubbing by Lord Walter FitzGerald, April, 1915.]

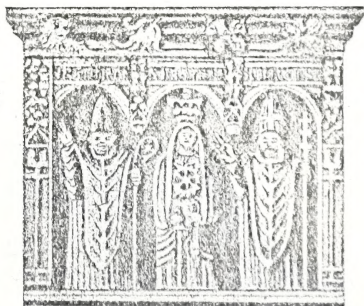

P.378a.

‘On the south side’ :—

- S' matthias : with an oar-like Lance in his right hand, and a Book in the left.
S' Bartholome' : with a Knife and a Book.
S' matheus : This figure is broken, and the emblem (generally a Purse), is gone.
S' thomas : with a long narrow builder's Rule and a Book.
S' Jacobus : (i.e. St. James the Less) with a Club and a Book.
S' andreas : with a saltire-shaped Cross and a Book.

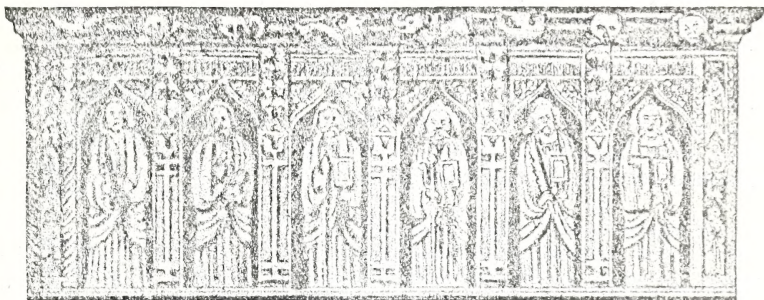

‘At the east end’ :—

- S' Katherbag' : a mitred Bishop, with an outward-turned Crozier in his left hand, and his right hand in the blessing-giving posture. His Festival occurs on the 14th of May.

ƿ' patricius : a mitred Bishop holding a patriarchal or trebly cross-topped Staff in the left hand, and the right raised in the blessing-giving posture.

‘On the north-side’ :—

ƿ' petrus : holding two Keys. No Book.
ƿ' Jobes : holding a Chalice. No Book.
ƿ' philup' : holding a Halbert and a Book.
ƿ' Jacobus : (i.e. St. James the Great or Elder), with a pilgrim's staff having a crook from which a wallet was slung in the right hand, and a Book in the left.
ƿ' Simon : with a Saw and a Book.
ƿ' Judas : (i.e. St. Jude alias Thaddeus) holding a short broad builder's Rule, and a Book. St. Jude is generally represented with a Halbert; the Rule is always associated with St. Thomas.

A HORN-BOOK.

'The books in the hands of the saints are of the handled horn-book type. With the exception of the Crucifixion scene, each individual saint has his, or her, name carved above the panel. There are other diminutive figures, generally one above the other, on the pillars at the ends of the sides, but no names are given.

'It is to be regretted that the name of the sculptor of this magnificent tomb does not appear on it; it is also unfortunate that scarcely anything is known of the MacCragh family, Mr. J. R. Garstin has collected scraps of information concerning various individuals of the sept which he has embodied in his valuable paper on this tomb, and which appeared in the "Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland," volume xxxiv (1904), part iv. This paper was of great assistance to me when examining the tomb in April, 1915.

'All the illustrations of the MacCragh Tomb, except the rubbings, have been, with the permission of the Council of the "Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland," reproduced from its Journal, vol. xxxiv, for the year 1904.'

COUNTY WESTMEATH.

Castlelost Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'This churchyard is situated some distance in the fields, away from the public road, but is very visible owing to the flat, hedgeless nature of the country.

'A large amount of the church ruins are standing, though the walls are very frail in parts, and show recent falls in them.

'Two ogee-headed windows of cut stone (one with 'an eye-brow' or drip-stone) still exist in the south wall. The single-light east window, inside, is circular-headed and of well-dressed stone; the interior curve of the arch is ornamented with carvings in high relief, including a square pattern, an intertwined knot, a mitred human head, and a heraldic lion. Unfortunately the outer cut-stone work of this window is torn away, and its form cannot now be ascertained.*

'The Church Tower is the full breadth of the Nave; it is vaulted (still showing in the mortar the impression of the wattle-work on which the arch was turned); its entrance was from inside the church. A double square-headed belfry (one portion of which alone now remains) topped the inner or eastern wall of the Tower. The floor over the vaulting was probably reached by a ladder through an opening in it, as there are no signs of any staircase. This first floor may have been used for residing in; but, owing to its present inaccessibility, it cannot be ascertained whether it contains a fire-place, like some of the early Church Towers.

'Inside the ruins there are only two flat slabs and two headstones, but it is quite possible that other slabs are concealed under fallen masonry, etc.

'The inscriptions on the slabs read':—

‘The late Mr. H. M. Pilkington of Tore, writing to the late Colonel P. D. Vigors in 1898, stated that :—

“About forty years ago I searched the old graveyard of Castlelost, and found an old tombstone of one of the Tyrrells who formerly owned the Barony of Fartullagh (in which it lies) ; it represented a knight in armour with the legs crossed ; I found one half of the broken stone at one end of the graveyard, and the other at the opposite side of the graveyard ; I think it is mentioned in Lewis’s Topographical Dictionary.”

‘Acting on this information, I visited Castlelost churchyard in the month of April, 1915, but after a minute search I was much disappointed in failing to find the slightest trace of the effigy.

‘To the south-east of the churchyard, about a quarter-of-a-mile away, stand the vaulted butt of a castle, and near it a moat or sepulchral mound.’

Mullingar Church and Burial-ground.

'The Protestant Church (St. Mary's) contains a good many modern mural monuments to the families of L'Estrange, Fetherstonhaugh, Swift, Barlow, Tuite, etc.; two of these monuments in the north transept are at such a height that since the removal of the gallery it is impossible to see their inscriptions..

'In the south transept there is a mural monument on which, owing to the lettering not being coloured, the inscription cannot be read without the aid of a ladder; the Sexton, Charles Winters, has kindly supplied me with the following copy of it:—

Under this Monument in a vault is deposited the Body of Hugh Bowen, lineal heir of the House of . . . pton in Pembrokehire, South Wales, who for the space of 44 years held the post of Collector of Trim, during which time he behaved as a pious and good Christian, faithful Subject, and affectionate Husband, tender Father and sincere Friend, and kind Master, beloved and lamented by all acquaintances. Departed 22nd May 1724, Aged 67. By his side is deposited the Body of Anne his wife, Daughter of Wil^m Jones of Rathconrath, Esq^r, whose truly pious and good life, with her constant Care and Love of her Children, before and after her Husband's decease made her the object of their dutiful regard, admired and beloved by all that knew her. Departed 23rd Dec^r 1738, Aged 73. Grateful to the memory of such excellent Parents, their Children have erected this Monument.

'In the north transept there is a mural monument bearing the following inscription':—

Here lyes the Body of Iohn
Cooke of Cookesborough
Esq^r who died the (?) 1 of Octob^r 1733 in the 77th year of his Age.

This Monument was Erected by the direction of Elizabeth his wife.

'On a shield below is a coat-of-arms, viz.':—

Three crescents in an ermine border; impaling a chevron between three pheons.

'The crest is a winged animal.'

'In the church porch there is now built into the wall a large slab in good preservation, having a crest, coat-of-arms, and motto cut in relief in the upper portion, viz.' :—

Crest : A demi-lion rampant, holding a staff.

Motto : VIRTUS DUCIT HONORE.

Arms : The Leigh arms quartered, impaling (?) Ashe, viz. :—

1 and 4. "A Lion rampant, a mullet on the shoulder."

2. "Three eagles displayed, semée of cross-crosslet"; for Somerville.

3. "Two bars, over all a bend"; for Leigh of Swineshead.

'The wife's coat is "two chevrons"; possibly she was an Ashe, as these arms are borne by that family.

'The inscription, in incised script lettering, reads' :—

This Tombestone with Vault and Pew were erected by the worship full S^r James Leigh, Knight, and Dame Mary his Wife for the use and burying-place of them and theire posterity. Anno Doñno 1683.

'Mr. G. D. Burtchaell, Athlone Pursuivant of Arms, has kindly supplied me with the following particulars about Sir James Leigh. He was of Cullenmore, Co. Westmeath; and son of Thomas Leigh of Dublin, descended from the Leighs of Easthall in Cheshire. His mother was Grace, daughter of James Rawson, of Dublin. Sir James was knighted on the 21st April, 1683; he was M.P. for Mullingar from 1661 to 1666, and High Sheriff for the County in 1671 and 1683. He died about 1690, and left issue three sons and three daughters; the surname of his wife is not recorded, but, as stated above, she may have been an Ashe.'

OUTSIDE THE CHURCH.

'Placed between the buttresses of the church tower there are fragments of four narrow slabs, all having cut on them in relief a stepped cross, either plain or with trefoil terminals to the arms, and inscriptions in raised Roman capitals running parallel with the shaft of the cross, in two lines on either side' :—

ENTERR^D 1740

‘ In the Hope enclosure there is the half of a large slab having lines of inscriptions round the edge, cut in “ the black letter ” ; I had not time to try and decipher it ; and the stone was too damp to make a rubbing from. The lettering appeared much worn, and probably belongs to the sixteenth century, which makes it the oldest tombstone in this burial-ground.

‘ In the enclosure is the tombstone of a priest, the inscription on which is thus given in Father Cogan’s “ History of the Diocese of Meath,” vol. ii, p. 471 ’ :—

Have Mercy, O Lord, on the soul of the Rev^d James Hope, who departed this Life February 24th 1819, aged 74 years. For the long period of 47 years he discharged the Arduous Duties of the Priesthood with fidelity to his God, honour to himself, and advantage to his Flock. Innocence of life, and Simplicity of Morals, together with an undeviating and unremitting attention to his sacred functions were the distinguishing characteristics of this much lamented and truly reverend ecclesiastic.

Requiescat in pace, Amen

‘ On the north side of the churchyard.

‘ On a small slab, lying flat, formerly a mural monument ’ :—

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘A long, narrow church and chancel in ruins stand in this large burial-ground. Most of the walls are down, except the gable ends.
 The west gable is topped by a double belfry, and appears to have no window in it, unless ivy hid ; the east gable contains a large, pointed, arched window which was mullioned, and of a rich design.
 In the south wall there is a Hiberno-Romanesque doorway which was in a tottering condition till repaired last year (1914) through the exertions of Miss Kathleen Browne, of Bridgetown.

‘The old church was dedicated to St. Fintan, who was venerated on the 17th of February, on which day it is the custom to “dress” the graves with laurel branches, &c.

‘On a flat slab, inside the chancel, runs the following inscription’ :—

Here lies the Body of TEMPEST KNOX Esq^{RE} who departed this life the 10th day of October
1817. Aged 89 years.

Also the Bodies of his Wife and five Children
& his uncle MAJOR ANDREW KNOX.

This Tomb also marks the spot where lie
the remains of M^{RS} ELIZABETH STROUD

COUNTY WICKLOW.

Burgage Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

‘This burial-ground is situated on a high, steep bank overlooking the Liffey, a mile to the south-west of the town of Blessington; its ancient name was “Dovenach-ymlach,” i.e., Donagh-Emlagh, meaning the church of the marshy ground (Joyce).

'The only remains of the old church is the tower, incorrectly called "the Castle," and as such shown on the 6-inch Ordnance Survey map (there never yet was a castle built in a churchyard).

'This church-tower has an arched entrance in the west wall; it has no vaulted story, but it has in its present condition three sets of projecting stone brackets on which floors rested; in the second story there is a large, wide fire-place and three small round-headed windows of cut-stone work.

'In the east wall of the tower, near its northern end, is an entrance into what was the body of the church; beside it is a doorway leading to a flight of steps ascending to the doorway of the first story, and continuing on, it turns round the corner up through the thickness of the south wall.

'There is a jamb, and half of the arch in cut-stone, of a doorway into the church, at the south-eastern angle of the church-tower. Of the church itself there is no trace, and it must have extended beyond the present limits of the burial-ground, near the south-eastern corner of which the church-tower stands.

'There are no monuments of any antiquity in the churchyard, except a large fractured plain Celtic cross-head, unperforated; this cross-head resembles that of another cross which stands just outside the churchyard wall on the northern side, which is in perfect condition (for which see p. 504, vol. v of the JOURNAL).

Near the church-tower, in that portion where the church stood, there are two monuments which attract one's notice. One of them represents the crucifixion of a very youthful Christ; the cross stands in a circular cut-stone base much sunk in the ground, on which is inscribed':—

.ERECTED BY M^r DOYLE IN MEMORY °F HIS M

'The other monument also represents the Crucifixion, with the figures of the B. V. Mary and St. John on either side of the cross; at the cross-top is an I.N.R.I., and at the foot are carved a pincers and a hammer; on the cross-head is cut the sentence':—

TAKE UP THY CROSS & FOLLOW ME

'Below on the base is inscribed':—

SACRED TO THE ME MORY OF PAT RICK LAWLER
AND HIS BELO VED WIFE ALSO SONS AND DAUGHTERS.
REQUIESCENT
IN PACE.

‘Though these two monuments probably only belong to the beginning of the nineteenth century, yet the inscriptions on them are difficult to decipher, and will be more so in years to come.’

‘There is a Blessed Well situated near the bridge over a little stream a few perches to the west of the churchyard ; it is unenclosed and in a neglected condition. The people in the neighbourhood call it “St. Mathus’s Well,” a saint I have failed to identify; thinking it might possibly be intended for St. Matthew, I got more than one person to pronounce the name, and satisfied myself that it was not St. Matthew.’

Nun’s Cross Churchyard, Parish of Killiskey.

[From the Rev. H. R. Huband.]

‘The ruins of the old church are still to be seen in the village of Killiskey.

‘In the year 1817 the present church was built at Nun’s Cross, a mile or more from the old site. The Parish is called Killiskey, but it was really changed at the consecration of the present church to that of Nun's Cross.'

Sacred to the memory of Daniel M^cClean, who departed this life Dec. 13th 1835. Aged 47 years. Faithful to his trust for 22 years he served with all fidelity his earthly master and for 12 years was the Steward of the late Francis and the present John Synge, Esq^r of Glanmore, in this county, in whose service he died. Racavan Churchyard.

[From Mr. W. F. Reynolds.]

'About eight miles, east by north, from Ballymena, in the midst of a beautiful and fertile country, under the shadow of Slieve-Mis of saintly memories, lies the little triangular burial-ground of Racavan—Rath Cabhain—"The fort of the hollow." This place of sepulture is enclosed by strong walls, and has a substantial double gate of forged iron. A good road now leads up to it, but I understand that until quite recently access to it was very difficult.

'Lewis, in his "Topographical Dictionary of Ireland," refers to it as being ancient, and, in his day, exclusively used by Presbyterians. Local tradition points it out as the favourite last resting-place of the early Scottish settlers in this district and their descendants.

'Many of the older stones are almost completely buried, and others have sunk so far into the ground that it is impossible to follow their worn inscriptions to the end; also a number have been broken and their fragments scattered. I was rather annoyed after spending some time in clearing what seemed to be a promising stone of its thick coat of moss and brambles to find that it had been broken across, and that, in order to mend it, three cramps of iron had been inserted, lengthwise, a little below the surface, which was finally smoothed off flush with cement. Unfortunately the workman had chosen to cut the tracks for his bands at the very points where ages and dates had originally appeared. The stone was neatly and effectually repaired, but quite as effectually ruined as a record. As will be seen from the inscriptions, the majority of names are Scottish. Among the few which are of distinctly Irish origin I found "Kane," O'Cahan; and "Reynolds," Mac Rannal or McRandle.'

Erected by Henry Thompson to the memory of his mother, Agness Thompson, wife to Ad^m Thompson: she departed this life the 13th of January, 1823, aged 64 years.

This in memory of Alexander Dickey, of Roughan, who departed this life the 18th November, 1784, aged 75 years. Also Jenet Graham, his wife, who died 3^d May, 1801, aged 52 years. Likewise their daughter, Jenet Dickey, who departed this life the 5th February, 1832, aged 53 years. Also of Mary Ann Dickey their daughter who died 13th December, 1850, aged 71 years. Also in memory of Jenny Graham who departed this life 14th February, 1858, aged 63 years.

Erected by Mary Reynolds, of Roughan, to the memory of her beloved husband James Reynolds who departed this life 12th Dec. 1856. aged 79 years. Also his son, John, who departed this life 18th Sep. 1857, aged 41 years. Also his son, William, who departed this life 10th Nov, 1857, aged 44 years.

Kilkee Church.

[From Mr. T. J. Westropp.]

‘Inside the Protestant Church’ :—

Sacred to the Memory of Sir Francis Nathaniel Burton, G.C.H., of Carrigaholt, who died at Bath on the 27th day of January 1832, and was buried in the Parish Church of St Andrew, Clifton, in the County of Gloucester. Also of his son Valentine. Alicia his widow, who died on the 4 day of February 1844, and whose mortal remains are deposited in the same vault with those of her beloved Husband.

‘This inscription is surmounted by a coat-of-arms and crest, viz.’ :—

‘Crest :—A dexter gauntleted hand.

‘Arms :—“A cross engrailed between 4 roses.” Other arms are quarter with this coat.

‘The Hon. Sir Francis N. Burton, G.C.H., was the second son of Francis Pierpont Burton, 2nd Baron Conyngham, nephew of Henry Conyngham, 1st Baron Conyngham, who, dying in 1781, without male heirs, the barony thus descended to his Burton nephew.

‘Sir Francis’s wife was the Hon. Valentina Alicia Lawless, daughter of Nicholas, 1st Baron Cloncurry, by whom he had three sons.’

Tulla Churchyard.

‘In the volume for 1911, p. 188, of the Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland, is given the inscription on the Molony Vault erected in 1702. It runs thus’ :—

HOC MONVMENTVM
 FIERI FECIT DOMINVS
 IACOBVS MOLONY DE KIL
 TANON DIE 2 IVNII 1702

SEVENTEENTH-CENTURY SLABS AT KILCREA ABBEY, CO. CORK.

[From a photograph by Mr. R. W. Gibson, Aberdeen.]

‘ With a later addition ’ :—

Quod ex vetustate ruinam minitans conditoris posterī
de domo Cragg refecerunt.

‘ The arms on the slab are:—1 and 4, A quiver with arrows and a bow; 2 and 3, two lions counter rampant, supporting a sword.

‘ The crest is a Dexter Arm, the hand holding a dagger.

‘ The arms in the 2nd and 3rd quarterings are, Mr. G. D. Burtchaell informs me, those of the O’Carrolls, viz. :—“ Argent, two lions rampant combatant gules, supporting a sword point upwards proper.”

‘ According to Burke’s “ Landed Gentry,” James Molony, who erected the vault, was three times married :—

‘ 1st. To Mary, daughter of Kennedy O’Brien, of Killernan, Co. Limerick.

‘ By all of whom he had issue. James Molony’s Will was proved in 1733; his mother may have been an O’Carroll.’

Barryscourt Castle Chimney-piece.

‘ In the Journal of the Cork Historical and Archæological Society, vol. xxi, p. 63 (1915), are illustrations of this castle, and of a large wide chimney-piece in it. On the lintel, which consists of three stones, the centre one dovetailed into the others, runs the following inscription, in raised Roman capitals ’ :—

A^o. D^oO. 1588. IHS. DB. ET. ER. ME. FIERI. FECERV^T.

‘ The initials D.B. stand for David Barry, Viscount Buttevant and Baron of Ibane, who died on the 10th April, 1617.

‘ The E.R. were the initials of his wife, Ellen Roche, 2nd daughter of David, Viscount Roche and Fermoy, by his wife, Ellen Butler, daughter of James, Lord Dunboyne.’

Castlemartyr South.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘Castlemartyr is about a mile’s distance from Mogelly Railway Station. The graveyard here appears to be an exclusively Protestant one. In its centre stands the church, a rather imposing structure for its size. There are seemingly but few graves and headstones; but, in the eastern end, is a rather large number of table-tombs. They are entirely grown over with ivy. In the west wall of the church is a stone thus inscribed’ :—

Near this place are interred | the remains of the Reverend George Smith | fifty-six years Incumbent of this Parish | He died on the 8th of May 1851 in the 84th
year of his age.

‘The following rather interesting inscription occurs, in bold letters, on a table-tomb near the south-west corner of the church’ :—

In certain hope of the resur | rection of the Just | Here

Donaghmore, Co. Cork.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘In this churchyard, which stands at some distance from the railway station, the walls of the old Protestant church still remain, whose interior is considerably taken up by two immense mausoleums of the Townsend and Rubie families, who have also graves outside. The following are only part of the inscriptions in this graveyard’ :—

Knockmourne Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘On tombstone, in the churchyard, are, according to Dr. Brady’s “Records of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross,” 1864, the two following inscriptions’ :—

Here lieth the body of the Rev John MacBeth, of Bride Park, who departed this life August the 13th 1842,
aged 82 years.

Here lie the remains of the Rev. Stephen Rolleston, Rector and Vicar of the Parishes of Ballinoe and Knockmourne, and Rector of Ahern in the Diocese of Cloyne, Vicar of the Parishes of Kilnalog, Castle Ellis, Killeely, Killesk, and Mullinagh, in the Diocese of Ferns. He died the 29th of February, 1780, aged 65 years.

Here also lye the remains of Dorothea, his Wife, who died April 12th, 1788, aged 60 years.

Also lye the remains of the Rev^d Jas. Rolleston, their son, who died March 18th aged 25 years.

Myross Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Buckley.]

'This churchyard is unusually well kept. Most of the ancient church is standing, including the high-pitched eastern gable. A lancet window in the east end is in a perfect state. The following are a few of the oldest inscriptions':—

on the 27 of January in the year of our lord 1846.
Aged 30 years. May she rest in peace. Amen.

'Gillaspie was a coastguard at Squence Station, hard by, and it is said that the headstone was brought by boat from Connaught.'

'There is a pyramid-shaped tomb, but no inscription, to the memory of General O'Donovan, of Bawnlahan. His military accoutrements were buried with him.'

Newmarket Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

'In this churchyard is buried Sarah Curran, daughter of the famous John Philpot Curran, who died Master of the Rolls. Sarah Curran was betrothed to Robert Emmet. She figures as the subject of a paper entitled "The Broken Heart" in Washington Irving's Essays, and in Moore's Melodies, "She is far from the Land," and "When he who adores thee." The Rev. John Chetwode of Cahirlag and Rathcorney wrote the following lines, which were intended to form an epitaph over the tomb at Newmarket, but the intention was never carried into effect :—

“ So late adorned with every grace of mind,
Here gentle Sarah lies, to peace consigned.
Thou soul of harmony ! thy harp unstrung,
Rests the sad emblem of thy tuneless tongue ;
Thy pensive grace, thy tasteful genius gone ;
Thy wit, thy playfulness, for ever flown.
A while to charm the earth thy powers were given,
But now sublimed they own their native heaven.”

‘ Within recent years, as stated in the Rev. J. H. Cole’s continuation of Dr. Brady’s “ Records,” “ A Celtic cross of freestone has been erected by the inhabitants of Newmarket in Newmarket Churchyard, chiefly through the exertions of Miss Aldworth, to the memory of Miss Sarah Curran Sturgeon.” ’

Rahan Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘ In Dr. Brady’s “ Records of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross (1864)” appears the following inscription, which was on a tombstone in this churchyard, which is near Mallow ’ :—

Here lies at rest the body of Rev. Arthur Frances, 22 years Vicar of the United Parishes of Rahan and Carrig. Though he was afflicted for the last two years with the entire loss of his sight, his memory was so good, and his application so constant, that he never failed in the regular discharge of his parochial duties. On the 19th day of November 1793 in the 54th year of his age, after a short illness, with that cheerful and lively hope which true piety inspires, he resigned his soul into the hands of his Creator.

Ringrone Churchyard.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘ Ringrone churchyard lies opposite Kinsale, a little to the south-west, and is only a quarter of an hour’s walk from the castle by park side, between which and Kinsale a ferry-boat plies. Near it stood Ringrone Castle, of which a tall fragment is left. In it are the walls of the former Protestant church, that was not the ancient one originally here. This churchyard is better looked after than those at Dunderrow and Tisaxon. There are two or three large built-up tombs here, including that of the De Courcys, Lords Kinsale, a solid stone structure, to which family the castle and the land around here belonged. The following are the older inscriptions to be seen in this churchyard :—

‘ Table-tomb ’ :—

Timoleague Abbey.

[From Mr. James Coleman.]

‘ Timoleague Abbey was originally almost a facsimile of its sister Franciscan Abbey at Kilcrea, County Cork, but it is in a better state of preservation, and not so much disfigured with graves as is the case with the latter, all of which are within its walls, whereas at Timoleague there are many graves in the ample space for burials outside the Abbey. There are few cut inscriptions compared to the number of graves, many of which are covered over with rough slabs of slate, and without any lettering whatever. The two most ancient and interesting graves here are in the nave, but the inscriptions are almost entirely obliterated. The following are oldest legible inscriptions' :—

'In the chancel' :—

Here lyeth the Body | of Patrick O'Neal | who Departed
This | Life March 20th 1795 Aged 55 years. May, &c.

Here lyeth the Body | of | Laurence Mallowⁿ | who

His daughter Ellen O'Hea.

‘In the chapel off the transept is a memorial cross inscribed at base’ :—

Beneath this cross | Awaiting a Happy Resurrection |
 Repose the Bodies of | Callaghan MacCarthy | who died
 April 1836 | and his wife Anne who died June 1847 and of their daughter Mary O’Hea | who died 11th October

Eskatheen Churchyard, Parish of Muff.

[From Mr. Charles McNeill.]

‘Eskatheen (locally pronounced Iskaheen = Uisge chaoin, as in the Four Masters at A.D. 465) is mentioned as the burial-place of Eoghan, son of Niall of the Nine Hostages, who conquered and occupied Inishowen shortly before St. Patrick began his apostolate; and being baptized by St. Patrick, is presumed by O’Donovan (Ord. Letters) to have had Christian burial where the graveyard now is. The people living in the immediate neighbourhood have no such tradition now, and had none in 1835, when O'Donovan made his survey visit. They know nothing and care nothing, as themselves avow, for the ancient remains still extant around them; and, accordingly, when the "miners," as they call them, were revising the survey, they had to locate a "giant's grave," without local aid, from their ordnance data. From its present state this "grave" has probably served as a quarry for road-metal; and other mounds are known to have been levelled within living memory.'

CO. DOWN.

Donaghadee Graveyard.

[From Mr. Gustavus E. Hamilton.]

‘On an upright tombstone, two or three yards from the east door of the parish church’ :—

Here rests Christian Hamilton relict of the Reverend Nicholas Hamilton formerly vicar of D.dee, died 9th
 May 1817 aged 81 years.

‘The above-named Christian Hamilton was a daughter of John Bailie, of Inishargie, Co. Down, and sister of James Bailie, M.P. for Hillsborough in the Irish Parliament, also sister of Jane Baillie, who married Robert Gillespie, of Comber, Co. Down, Esq., and had one son, Major-General Sir Robert Rollo Gillespie, killed at Kalunga, East Indies, 31st October, 1814.

'The Rev. Nicholas Hamilton was born in 1725; Curate of Loughan Island, 1753; Vicar of Tollynakill, 1759; Vicar of Tollynakill and Curate of Grey Abbey, 1761-70; Vicar of Donaghadee, 1771, until his death in June, 1787. He had four sons who left issue; and his descendants in the male line are at present extant in Ireland, England, Canada, United States, Victoria, and Queensland. He was the eldest son of the Rev. Gustavus Hamilton, Curate of Enniskillen, 1720-28; Vicar of Errigle Trugh, 1730, &c.; died 1755, by his wife, Jane Cathcart. He was descended of the Hamiltons of Ballyfatton, Co. Tyrone.

'Extracted from "Hamilton Memoirs" by Everard Hamilton, London, 1891.

Dunsfort Church.

[From Mr. Francis Joseph Bigger.]

'The following inscription, in raised letters, is cut boldly on a large heavy slab, now set up against the west wall (inside) of the Protestant church of Dunsfort, near Ardglass, in Lecale. Below it is cut in incised letters the accompanying Latin inscription':—

HERE
LYETH INTERD
THE BODIES OF MAIOR
ARCHBALD WARDLAW WHO DYED THE 20TH DAY OF OCTO^{BR}
1656 & OF HIS SON ALEXAN^{DER} WARDLAW WHO DYED THE 8TH DAY OF JULY 1675

SIC PIETAS PROBITAS PRUDENS (P) SAPIENTIA
CANDOR VITAE FERENTUR NECTERE POSSE MORAS
NON HOC DIGNA FUIT TELLUS MELIORA PETIVIT
PRAEMIA LOTOSUM SUB PEDE CALCAT HUMUM

'Which may read in English':—

Though piety, noble uprightness, wisdom, and purity of life are said to lengthen one's days, the earth was not worthy of this man; he spurned beneath his feet the muddy earth

'Nothing is now known of the Wardlaws locally or historically. This tombstone is their sole record. As pious Cromwellians they are not even credited with the destruction of the famous shrine, which was ever spoken of traditionally, and had never passed from memory, though rooted out and destroyed by the planters (as they thought); yet every fragment was hidden away and preserved until restored to me for re-erection (see below). Many more of our ancient monuments were, doubtless, so treated.

'In the 1642 Muster Roll there was a company captained by Archibald Wardlaw, and mustered at Portaferry, which is quite close to Dunsfort. In the old "Ulster Journal," vol. i, p. 93, there is a note about this name as being of Scotch origin. In the 1668 Subsidy Roll there was a Thomas Wardlaw, of Downpatrick, a James, of Drumca, and an Archibald, of Tollivery, all in Down. They were all adventurers, with a strong Scottish tendency to become settlers.

'Dunsfort was a place of importance. There was erected the shrine to "Our Lady of Dunsfort," with its twelfth-century statue, the fragments of which I had lately carefully gathered from places far apart, and the complete figures set up in the niched gable of the Catholic church. There is also a twelfth-century cross-slab, well carved and finely proportioned; an interlaced cross-slab; two large perfect basin stones; and other relics of an old Irish civilization.

Kilbroney Churchyard.

[From Lord Walter FitzGerald.]

'Heavily ivy-clad ruins of Kilbroney church stand in this burial-ground, but there are no interesting features in it; there is no cut-stone work, and the walls still standing are of very inferior quality. It was used as the Protestant parish church for Rostrevor, till another was erected in that town in the eighteenth century, which itself is now a ruin, and replaced by a handsome large church in the upper part of the town.

'A few inscriptions from this churchyard appeared on pages 272 and 273, vol. viii of the JOURNAL; those which follow have not been given among them (except two, corrected here), none of which is earlier than the eighteenth century.

'The oldest inscription is on an insignificant little thin head-stone not more than nine inches broad; in the upper part is roughly carved a chalice, a face, a wine-glass, a sun bearing an I.H.S., and one or two other objects; below them is cut in very small letters the still very legible inscription':—

*Now written M^cGivern.

THE CELTIC CROSS AT KILBRONEY.

[From a photograph by Lawrence, Dublin.]

the memory of the Irish giant, Patrick Murphy, who stood 8 feet 1 inch; he was born at Killowen, near Rostrevor, on the 15th June, 1834, and died at Marseilles, in France, on the 18th April, 1862. His body was embalmed, sent home, and interred in Kilbroney churchyard on the 18th June, 1862. Owing to his marvellous height, Patrick Murphy was persuaded to be exhibited in a travelling show, and hence his death from smallpox in a foreign land. He is said to have been of magnificent build in proportion to his height.

'Placed at the foot of his grave, removed from the head at the time of the erection of the Celtic cross, stands a red sandstone headstone which is thus inscribed':—

 HERE LIETH
 THE BODY OF HEN RY MUR PHY WHO
 DEPARTED this life
 November y^e 19th, 1746
 Aged 17 years.

'Out in the field on the south side of the churchyard is St. Bronagh's Blessed Well; it is partially covered by a flag, and the roots of an ancient ash-tree surround it on three sides. The peasantry now pronounce this saint's name Brenno, which must be a corruption of Bronagh. I was informed in April, 1914, that the burial-ground is about to be extended on the south side, and that the Board of Guardians have condemned this ancient ash-tree as being in the way; probably, too, "St. Brenno's Well" will be drained at the same time, and thus a relic of Celtic times will become obliterated.

'The one object of an ancient date in the churchyard is an unringed Celtic cross, which stands on mason-work near the south-east corner of the burial-ground. The front of it is covered with "the key-pattern" design, but the back and sides are not sculptured at all, and a very unusual feature in it is that the back of the cross is not of the Celtic shape, but a Latin cross. As far as I am aware this is unique in a sculptured Celtic cross. Its height (from the pedestal) is $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet, and the width across the arms 3 feet; one arm, which had been broken off, is fixed on again.

'Many years ago an ancient square bronze bell was discovered in the hollow stem of an old tree in the churchyard, which had been blown down by a gale. This bell, which is of a larger size than most Celtic ecclesiastical hand-bells, now hangs in a frame on the steps of the High Altar of the Roman Catholic church in Rostrevor.'

Derrybrusk Old Churchyard.

[From Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

‘This churchyard, containing the ruins of the old Parish Church, is situated in the townland of Fyagh, which adjoins that of Derrybruske. The church is dedicated to St. Senach, a worker in metals (venerated on the 11th May), and its ancient name was Airech Brosga, now corrupted into Derrybrusk. The church is very ancient, and has six small square-headed windows, of which two are in the west gable, one above the other; and the other four are in the western end of the southern wall, two being above and two below. There is also a fine east window, which is probably fourteenth-century, and there is a ruined window in the eastern end of the southern wall of the same date. The doorway was in the south wall, and it, and practically all the north wall, have now disappeared. The west gable seems to have sustained great damage at some period, and to have been subsequently repaired. Some of the windows are mentioned and illustrated in an article by the Rev. J. E. McKenna, M.R.I.A., in the Ulster Journal of Archaeology, vol. xii, 1906, p. 125. The church is mentioned in the Ecclesiastical Taxation of 1302-7 (Diocese of Clogher). In 1536 this church was much damaged in a raid by O'Neill and Cormac Maguire. Until the middle of the nineteenth century the parish was in four detached portions. At the beginning of the seventeenth century this church was in ruins, and it is said never to have been rebuilt by the Protestants, who held vestries within the ruins, as they were without a church until after the Disestablishment, when one was built for the parish in the townland of Derrykarney, which was formerly in the parish of Aghalurcher. The present Church of Ireland Parish only contains two of the townlands which were in the original parish. The living was in the gift of the Bishop of Clogher until Disestablishment. In the Roman Catholic Church this parish has not existed since the Reformation. The churchyard is still used for burials.

'Within the ruined church are two armorial tombstones.'

[Copied by the late Lady Edith and Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

'Flat stone :—

THE BODY OF THOMAS GOODLAFF
WHO DEPARTED
HERE LYETH THE 16TH FEB 1871

'In the centre of the inscription there is a coat-of-arms with the initials T.G. in the dexter and sinister top corners of the shield.

'Coat-of-arms :—"Three unicorns' heads erased, in chief a mullet pierced, for a difference."

'There is no crest, motto, helmet, or mantling.'

'Flat stone :—

'Coat-of-arms :—"Two spears crossed saltirewise between three fleurs-de-lis (those on the sinister and dexter sides being arranged to slope outwards), and in base three annulets, in the honour point a mullet, for a difference," for Montgomery; impaling "three unicorns' heads erased in the fesse point, a mullet for a difference," for Goodlatt.

'There is no crest, motto, helmet, or mantling.

'The inscription, which was below the shield, is now entirely defaced. Below the inscription are carved:—

Coffin.	Skull.	Hour-glass.
(upright)		(on its side)
Cross-Bones.

'This tombstone is probably that of the Rev. Andrew Montgomery, Vicar of Magheross, Magheraclone, and Killanny, who died in 1719, or that of his wife, who was a Miss Goodlatt, as the coat-of-arms is similar to that on the chalice which the Rev. Andrew Montgomery presented to the church of Magheross (Carriackmacross), Co. Monaghan. Their daughter, Elizabeth, who d.v.p. and unm. in 1716, is, however, buried at Magheross old churchyard. The Rev. Andrew Montgomery was the third son of the Rev. Nicholas Montgomery, of Derrybrusk House, Co. Fermanagh, who died circa 1706. It is possible this tombstone may be that of the Rev. Andrew Montgomery's parents, as it is unknown who his mother was.

'Mr. H. de F. Montgomery, of Blessingbourne, Co. Tyrone, a representative of this family, found some years ago under this stone a rusty inscribed coffin-plate, on which all that was legible was the name Montgomery and the figure 64, which must have formed part of the date 1641 or 1764. Mr. Montgomery thinks it probably was the latter date; but if it was the earlier one, the coffin-plate may be that of Hugh Montgomery, who settled at Derrybrusk, and was father of the Rev. Nicholas, and who was dead by the autumn of 1641, when the Irish rebellion broke out, or of his wife, or of a child of his, if he had more than one.'

'There is also in this churchyard a flat tombstone with an inscription to the Hon. John and the Hon. James Lindsay Crawford, second and third (not fourth) sons of John first Viscount Garneck, both of whom died in 1745. This inscription has been published in the JOURNAL on p. 488, vol. ii, 1894. I think that at present this stone is grass-grown, as I have failed so far to locate it.'

Derryvullan Old Churchyard.

[From Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

'The name Derryvullan is derived from Airech Maelain, which, according to Dr. Reeves, means "the point or promontory of Maelain." I am not certain when John Maguire, Parson of Derryvullan, obtained this benefice; but he died in 1495. Since writing the notes on this churchyard which appeared in the JOURNAL for 1915, I have obtained some further information on the subject. I have been informed that there is a vault under the old church belonging to the Denny family of Derryvullan House. In it was buried Anthony Denny, of Derryvullan, who was born in 1770, and died in 1806. Vault No. 40.

Mr. H. de F. Montgomery, D.L., of Blessingbourne, Co. Tyrone, has kindly supplied me with a copy of the inscription, which is cut in raised letters below the coat-of-arms on the inner stone, which is built on its side into the entrance of the Mountgomery vault. I have compared this copy with the original, and have slightly corrected it. Part of the first three lines of the inscription are now hidden by the outer inscribed stone to Mr. James Mountgomery, of Carry, and the remainder of the inscription is now so hard to decipher that, without taking a rubbing, it is impossible to be certain of the absolute accuracy of the copy.

'Flat stone, with coat-of-arms, &c., now built into the vault':—

HEAR LAYETH UNDER THIS STONE THE BODY OF NEALL
MOVNTGOMERY WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE UPON THE
2 DAY OF MAY
1685 AND OF HIS AGE 90.
NEAR TO HIS SON JAMES MOVNTGOMERY DIED THE 15 JANVARY 1709~
AGED 53 YEARS~

'The part of the inscription within the dotted line is hidden by the outer stone, while some of the remainder seems now to be obliterated.

'In the Muster Roll of Ulster of 1633, a Neal Mountgomery is mentioned among the men and arms of Hugh Mountgomery, of Derrybrusk (in the adjoining parish of that name). He probably is the Neall, or Niall, Mountgomery who is buried here. This stone is, therefore, of great interest, not alone as the only seventeenth-century tombstone so far found at Derryvullan, but also as being that of one of the original Scottish settlers in Ulster.

'I found another tombstone is of eighteenth-century date.

'No. 30. A raised slab. A coat-of-arms which I cannot decipher. It consists of a crest and wreath, a shield and mantling':—

He was son of Col. Edward Denny, of the Tralee family, by his wife Mary, daughter and heiress of David Rynd, of Derryvullan, and was father of Edward Denny, who died 1839, and who was buried at Rome. Edward Denny’s wife, whose name is obliterated on the tombstone, was Georgina, daughter of Arthur Blennerhasset, of Ballyseedy, Co. Kerry. She was buried at Nice. Lisbellaw Churchyard.

[From Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

‘ Lisbellaw Church was built in 1764 by Ralph Gore, first Earl of Rosse, as a church or chapel-of-ease for that part of Cleenish Parish which lay to the north-west of Lough Erne. It now is the church of the distinct ecclesiastical parish of Lisbellaw. Lord Rosse is buried in a vault underneath the church, which is situated on a rocky hill overlooking the small town of Lisbellaw, and is a plain building of eighteenth-century design with an imposing modern Gothic tower, which was erected in 1896. There is a small sundial in the churchyard, made by S. Yeates, of Dublin. The Parish Register begins in 1829. The only eighteenth-century inscriptions which are now legible are given below. They were copied by the late Lady Edith Lowry-Corry.

THE MAGUIRE COAT-OF-ARMS ON A SLAB IN PUBBLE CHURCHYARD.

[From a rubbing by Lady Dorothy and the late Lady Edith Lowry-Corry.]

Pubble Churchyard, Enniskillen, alias Iniskeen Parish.

[From the late Lady Edith Lowry-Corry.]

‘Note on Pubble Church, by Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry:—

‘The ruined church of Pubble, situated about a mile and a half south-west of Tempo, was a chapel of ease of Enniskillen Parish. The name of this church, also called Pubble Patrick, is derived from the tradition that St. Patrick here preached to a large crowd or congregation, and it was here that he missed a manuscript, which he had left at a mill on the neighbouring river, so he said to his servant: “Return to the mill and bring with you my book,” from which occurrence the mill is said to have obtained the name of Tiompodh deisill (now Tempo), or the returning back. This church is mentioned in the Inquisition of 1603 as the chappell of “Popull al^r Collidea,” as well as the “Popish Church of the Pubble.” It was, however, only a chapel of ease. In 1699 and 1704 the Enniskillen Vestry voted money for the rebuilding of this chapel. In 1771 the roof was ceiled, and in 1775 the chapel was thatched and repaired; but as it was then in a ruinous condition, it was resolved to rebuild it elsewhere. In 1780 Hugh Maguire, of Tempo, gave a site there for a new chapel, and in 1784 Pubble Chapel was ordered to be pulled down, the materials to be used in building a wall round its graveyard. In 1789 money was voted for building this wall, which still exists. The only remains of the old church still standing is a ruinous gable with a large window or opening in the centre, which probably formed the west wall of the church. The south side of this window is arched at the top, while the north side is straight, giving the “window” a peculiar appearance of having been partially built up. The gable is 17 or 18 feet wide, and the window is 6 feet wide. There is a vault on the site of the old church belonging to a Presbyterian family named Little, but which has no inscription; otherwise the churchyard seems now to be used entirely by Roman Catholics. It contains many tombstones. The following inscriptions were copied by the late Lady Edith Lowry-Corry:—

‘No. 1. Flat stone’:—

‘Coat-of-arms:—A knight on horse back (the shield is surrounded by mantling, but there is no helmet).

‘Crest:—Above a wreath, a stag statant.

‘Motto:—This is so defaced as to be almost illegible; the rubbing of it is inaccurate. The motto should read—PRO · DEO · PATRIA · ET · LEGE. It is probable that the coat-of-arms is meant to be that borne by various Maguires—i.e., Vert, a white horse fully caparisoned, thereon a knight in complete armour, in the dexter hand a sword, all proper. Crest on a ducal coronet or, a stag statant proper, collared or lined, or, see arms of M^cGuire, of Clonea House, Co. Waterford. There is now no trace of a coronet or sword on the tombstone.

Rossorry Old Churchyard.

[From Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry.]

'This churchyard is situated on the western slope of a hill in the townland of Rossorry, on the western shore of Upper Lough Erne, into which, to the south of the hill, flows the Sillies River. On the summit of a hill are the remains of a rath said to have been raised by St. Enda of Arran as a protection for the convent of nuns, founded here by his sister St. Fanchea in the fifth century. She died on 1st January, 515, on which day her feast was observed at Rossorry. A church or monastery dedicated to St. Fanchea was built here in 1084, but while it belonged to a religious community, at least until 1423, it also became the Parish Church of Rossorry, as by 1365 it had a parson or rector. Previously, according to the Ecclesiastical Taxation of the Diocese of Clogher of 1302-7, this parish was called Lisnegabail (Lisgoole), so Rossorry must then have been subordinate to Lisgoole Abbey, which was situated in this parish.

'This church is shown in the Baronial Maps of Co. Fermanagh of 1609 as being in a locality called Soshurlier. Until Disestablishment this living was in the gift of the Bishop of Clogher, and the parish church stood here until 1841 or 1842, when it was entirely pulled down and removed, a larger church having been erected in the townland of Mullanacaw. In the Roman Catholic Church this parish is united to that of Enniskillen.

'The following seem to be the only armorial stones in the graveyard:—
